LOVE FINDS A WAY TO THE ALTAR

NOBLE SWEEPS BARRIERS AWAY

Count Hugo Charles Moy and his bride, who was Miss Pamela Speyer, daughter of Sir Edward and Lady Speyer of London, as they appeared coming out of St. Patrick's Cathedral today after their wedding. She renounced her Jewish faith to wed Count Moy, who is a Catholic, and he proved that a civil marriage ceremony with a cabaret dancer in Berlin was no marriage because she already had a husband.

EIGHT HURT IN PITTSBURGH BOMB BLAST

Pittsburgh, May 28 (A.P.).—Many lives were endangered today when a bomb wrecked a store in the downtown district, a few blocks from City Hall. A score of windows in the Catholic Home for Working Girls, across the street, were shattered. Eighty girls housed in the building became panic-stricken, but were quieted by sisters. Eight occupants of the store building were injured.

ON HER fifty-ninth birthday, last Wednesday, Queen Mary of England had her daughter's new little baby as a guest at the birthday luncheon.

Afterward the baby was carried to the gate of Buckingham Palace and shown to all the women and girls assembled. The English newspapers will print pictures of the baby sitting at the birthday party of her grandmother, the Queen.

That's the sort of thing that postpones a republic in Great Britain. The royal family is liked, and well advised.

L. J. FARRELL, who stole $200,000 from a bank, says he lost $3,000 a day betting on races—one million dollars in all. He is in jail for twelve years.

Racetrack betting manufactures thieves, sends scores of young men to prison.

Prize fighting gathers together criminals and spreads disease.

Racing amuses "gentlemen."

CHIEF SURE GIRL'S BODY IN POND

CONSTABLE GIVES NEW CLUE TO SUSPECT IN METHUEN MYSTERY

Methuen, May 28.—Convinced that a girl had been attacked, divested of blood-stained silken clothing and thrown into Searle's Pond, the police today hastened the draining of the pond in a hunt for her body.

The blood-stained piece of clothing was found on the shore of the pond —a complete outfit of costly apparel, with the exception of the shoes, which are still missing.

Although at first inclined to believe the clothing was "planted" as a hoax, Chief of Police Frank M. Seiferth of Methuen abandoned that theory entirely when he learned that the clothing was almost new, was of most expensive texture and that the dress was the same one worn by a girl seen sitting beside the pond yesterday.

This information was given Chief Seiferth by Edward Hayes, constable in the town treasurer's office, who saw the girl, sitting on a boulder and who said he thought it peculiar that the man a few hundred feet along the shore, should be watching her so sharply.

The strange man, Hayes declared, and making motor trips with him.

LEAPS FOR LIFE FROM FLAMES IN MARLBORO

Marlboro, May 28.—While flames licked at him, a lodger hung to the casing of a second-floor window in the Oxford House today, then leaped to the street in a desperate attempt to escape fire sweeping the building.

He was picked up unconscious, in a critical condition, one of six men who were trapped in their beds when the flames, believed to have started by someone smoking in bed, ran rapidly through the structure.

One of the five was overcome by smoke and was carried from the Oxford, situated at No. 37A Mechanic street, and another escaped by leaping to the roof of an adjoining building.

Three others of the six were taken down ladders by the firemen, who reached the men just in time to save them from being overcome.

All occupants of the house were asleep when the fire, thought to have been smouldering for some time, was fanned into action.

Joseph A. St. Laurent, awakened by the choking smoke, found his escape through the corridors cut off, but he managed to beat the sweeping flames to a window out of which he clambered and hung on until the firemen arrived.

Before they could get a ladder up to him, however, he leaped.

Joel Norton, James Pandall and Charles Stephanos were nearly overcome in their beds, so rapidly did the smoke fill the house. Lyman Jesse, who succumbed to the smoke, was cut while being carried out by firemen.

Hinman to Tell How Much It Cost U. S. to Meddle in Europe

George Wheeler Hinman, lately president of Marietta (O.) College, is one of the ablest of America's financial experts. His writings are appreciatively read by all business men and appear regularly on the financial pages of the Hearst publications.

The articles which will be reproduced on the first page of this newspaper have already been addressed to business men, but the publisher of this paper desires all its readers to read these articles carefully and realize what it costs the people of the United States to meddle in European affairs.

Consider the thousands of millions of dollars which have been forgiven—and that means actually given—to foreign nations and think how many great public improvements, how many schools and universities and libraries and hospitals could have been built, how many river routes and land highways could have been constructed with this money, how many deserts could have been reclaimed, how many swamps drained, how many important developments of immense benefit to our country could have been accomplished.

Think of all this wealth of ours wasted in wars that are not our wars, and hereafter, at least, let us keep "free from foreign entanglements," as the Father of Our Country wisely warned us to do.

ARTICLE NO. 1

By GEORGE WHEELER HINMAN.

"Does the program for settling the French war debt mean that France will really pay what she owes the United States? Or that she will pay even decent interest charges on the debt?

"What is fundamentally the matter with the franc? Will not France end in complete bankruptcy, with the franc as worthless as the assignat of the French Revolution? If so, would France repudiate all her domestic debts based on the franc?

"What effect would such repudiation have on France's debt to us? Is there any way in which France can prevent such bankruptcy and repudiation?"

These questions, as received by telegraph on Friday, are so acutely put that they almost answer themselves. Nevertheless, they will be answered here.

The French debt settlement before the Senate this week does not provide that France really shall pay her war debt.

According to previous understandings, France was to pay not only the four thousand million dollars that she owes us but was to pay about 4½ per cent. interest—that is, the rate that the United States paid and pays for the money lent by the United States Treasury to France. This would mean a yearly payment of about one hundred and seventy million dollars in interest.

Yet in none of the sixty-two years does France propose to make a payment of anything like this sum. At the beginning,

HANG WORK IN EFFIGY FOR BALKING FARMERS

Scotts Bluff, Neb., May 28 (A.P.).—Dr. Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior, and Dr. Elwood Mead, Commissioner of Reclamation, were hung in effigy here by an angry group of farmers and citizens, who blame them for failure of the government to supply the irrigated North Platte Valley with needed water from the government project.

The two effigies were left dangling in front of the office of the Water Users Association, which is the central organization of the North Platte Valley farmers who are now seeking water.

One of the effigies had but one arm with a sign "Dr. Elwood Mead" attached to it. Dr. Mead has only one arm. The other effigy was

REP. SAWYER DEMANDS POPULAR VOTE HERE ON DRY LAW MODIFICATION

A demand that the voters of Massachusetts be given an opportunity next Fall to say whether they wish the Volstead Act modified was made today in a bill filed by Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware, a Congregational minister.

His action follows the move for a prohibition referendum taken in New York State and similar movements in other States of the Union.

The referendum sought by Representative Sawyer would be on the question of modifying the Volstead act so as to permit the manufacture, sale and distribution of beverage liquors to contain more than one-half of one per cent. alcohol, yet to be non-intoxicating.

SWEETSER REACHES BRITISH GOLF FINALS

Muirfield, Scotland, May 28 (A.P.).—Jesse Sweetser of New York reached the final of the British amateur golf championship today by winning W. G. Brownlow of Ireland in their semi-final match at the twenty-first hole.

Sweetser will play S. F. Simpson, a young Scotchman, tomorrow for the championship. Simpson won his semi-final match from Arthur Jamieson, Jr., 1 and 1.

Billy Jones, the American champion, was eliminated from the tournament, losing to A. Jamieson, Jr., by the score of 4 up and 3 to play.

Jones' brilliance of yesterday against Robert Harris was lacking in his match this morning. He lost his first and second holes by taking fives to the Scotchman's par fours. The third was halved in fours.

Bobby took the short fourth with a birdie two. But went two down on the fifth when he missed a one-yard putt. The sixth was halved and the short seventh in threes.

Jamieson was dormie-bunkered on the eighth, and Jones won the hole with a four. Bobby was lucky in

BATH-TUB GIRL UNDER BAN IN NORTH ADAMS

North Adams today followed suit of Northampton and Pittsfield and barred Joyce Hawley, the lady of the bath, who stepped into the limelight of publicity and a bath of amber fluid at the now famous Broadway home of the also famous Earl Carroll.

Miss Hawley must not dance in North Adams. Mayor William Johnson issued orders proscribing public appearance of the Broadway nymph who admitted at Carroll's perjury trial she bathed in a tub in the altogether after she became fuddled with drinks. Promoters of the entertainment cancelled the engagement after hearing of the Mayor's order.

Mayor Johnson of North Adams said he would confer with Mayor Welch of Northampton, who refused to permit Miss Hawley to appear there, on the ground that citizens "did not want that type of attraction."

Indications are that Boston also will refuse to let her appear in public in the Hub.

SAWYER DEMANDS STATE VOTE FOR 'SHOWDOWN' ON RUM LAWS

WOULD END RULE OF FANATICS

Voters would also give their opinion on the question of whether State Legislatures should be allowed to regulate and control liquors used for medicinal purposes.

Representative Sawyer was a member of the Legislature when the State "Baby - Volstead act" was passed, and who voted against the law, claiming it to be too drastic and tending to defeat the ends of temperance.

He has drawn his bill along the lines of the daylight saving referendum, passed by the 1924 Legislature.

Commenting on his bill today, Representative Sawyer declared:

"The response to the recently conducted newspaper canvasses of the sentiment of the people in regard to modifying the Volstead Act show how much the people are interested in the question.

DEMANDS SHOWDOWN.

"At Washington and in Massachusetts leaders on both sides of the question were yesterday quoted as being in favor of a referendum of the people, each side professing to believe its own side would win.

"Let us, then, have a showdown on the question. Let the members of the next Congress know what their States want.

"Already a bill has become law in New York, and other States are contemplating similar legislation.

"We are still in session and can readily pass such a law for the Fall election to give the people a chance to decide upon the question.

"I cannot see how the legislative leaders in Massachusetts can refuse to pass this law at the present time unless they are committed to one side or the other.

"In my own opinion the situation is very clear. For years we had laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors made by those who made their incomes selling rum.

"For the past six years we have had regulation made by a minority of fanatics against rum. Why not for the great sober common-sense people to be allowed to assert itself.

"The 10 per cent, who made money in some form or other from selling rum had their day, and they made a miserable failure of it. Then 10 per cent. of bone dry fanatics have had their day in court and made a failure almost equally miserable.

"Why not give the great 80 per cent., which neither sells rum nor is fanatical, their chance. This referendum would give us a chance to hear from them."

"BLOW AT RIGHTS"

Legislators Here Resent Coolidge New Order on Dry Law

President Calvin Coolidge's executive order offering to create Federal prohibition officers out of any local police officer or small-town constable willing to accept a shining companion to his badge of authority was submerged under a wave of condemnation as scores of Massachusetts legislators rallied to the support of the Welch bill filed in the House.

Representative Welch's bill, aimed to block the President's edict, would prevent acceptance of Federal employment by any police officer or constable in Massachusetts under penalty of removal or discharge and states that no constable, city marshal, chief of police or police officer shall accept appointment or compensation or perform any duties as prohibition officers.

Further encroachment on State Rights by the Federal government was fervidly opposed in statements issued by Legislators commenting on the executive order which they declare would mean an absolute violation of States rights if carried into effect and bring ruin and disaster to the country.

REPRESENTATIVE EDWARD J. KELLEY of Worcester, minority floor leader of the House—"The Welch order against federalizing our Municipal and state officers meets with my endorsement. I am against any further centralization of police powers. President Coolidge's order would mean an absolute violation of State rights and means nothing but ruin and disaster for the country.

REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM P. PRENDERGAST, Second Suffolk District—The executive order issued by President Coolidge should be withdrawn. It is a direct invasion of State rights and is obnoxious to a liberty-loving people.

REPRESENTATIVE RICHARD J. GARVEY of Boston: I am opposed to any further encroachment on State rights by the Federal government, and heartily endorse the Welch bill.

REPRESENTATIVE ROLAND D. SAWYER OF WARE, CONGREGATIONALIST MINISTER: The unfortunate order of President Coolidge admits its failure to use State officials in States where State law prohibits such use. The evils which would follow the Federal control of State police officials are so many that State law should forbid it."

JAMES T. WELCH, Representative from North Adams, and author of the bill to prohibit state and municipal police and firemen from acting as Federal prohibition enforcement officers. — Massachusetts, I feel sure, would resent its territory being invaded by police officers of other States, acting as Federal prohibition agents. And I am just as positive that other States do not want Massachusetts officers snooping within their jurisdiction. It is my hope that this action of mine will bring about the awakening of the people of the State to the necessity of having an early referendum on the Volstead act itself.

REPRESENTATIVE FRANCIS X. COYNE, Boston: The Coolidge executive order is a blow at the rights of self-government which is so sacred to the people of New England. Our forefathers fought, died and bled, to make possible the weaving of the tallest fabric of government ever woven in the annals of human history. Any infringement upon the rights of local self-government is contrary to the fundamental principal of our paramount laws.

SENATOR WILLIAM J. FRANCIS of Charlestown—"I am opposed to all centralization of power whose only purpose is to crush the rights and privileges of the individuals. The moment a local officer gives up his local allegiance for that of a dual arrangement, then he should be forced to give up his local job. You can't support God and Mammon, the scriptures say, and neither can you successfully divide your allegiance and be equally true to both of your trusts. Keep your local authority intact. I am against further Federal encroachments upon the rights of the masses."

SENATOR WILLIAM I. HENNESSEY of Dorchester: Executive order authorizing enrollment of State and city officials as prohibition agents is an utter disregard of State rights and an unwarranted invasion of State police functions, centralization of authority as suggested is an abrogation of the Bill of Rights. Ultimately there would be conflict between the Federal, State and city police authorities relative to their respective powers.

REPRESENTATIVE RICHARD D. CROCKWELL (REPUBLICAN) of MEDFORD: "Aside from the liquor question, I am opposed to any further encroachment of State rights or centralization of power in the Federal government."

SENATOR JOHN W. McCORMACK, South Boston.—The bill introduced by Representative Welch is correct; consistent with our dual theory of self-government, and is aimed to prevent centralization of power in Washington.

Our forefathers fought to establish local self-government; the agitators, reformer and theorists of today are compelling us to fight to preserve it.

LEEDS 'TURNED NATIVE' IN SOUTH SEAS

Honolulu, May 28. (Universal)—William B. Leeds, America's wealthiest youth and most democratic spendthrift, sailed for San Francisco on the Matson liner Matsonia.

He left behind him a warm glow in the hearts and purses of the natives of the South Sea Islands and the crews of the steamships which have borne him upon his more or less hectic cruise through Polynesia.

TAKEN AS SNUB.

Among the upper strata of society in Honolulu, Samoa and the Fijis there is a different sort of feeling—one rather like annoyance, such as one feels when one has been thoroughly and completely snubbed. For young Leeds chose his friends and companions among the natives, stewards and musicians with whom he came in contact and failed utterly to accept invitations to private home or country clubs.

His associates in Honolulu were limited to the beach boys at Waikiki, and so close was this association that when he found he could not entertain them at dinner at the exclusive Alexander Young Hotel, where he stopped, he took his meals with them at the modest lunch room they patronize on the opposite side of the street.

PLAYS FOR JAZZ.

On his way from the Fijis to Honolulu aboard the Sierra, Leeds spent practically all of his time with the musicians of the jazz orchestra, where he took over the manipulation of the drums. Although he had booked a passage through to San Francisco, he left the ship suddenly when Commodore J. H. Trask, commander of the Sierra, refused to allow him to play jazz all night. He was unable to buy the ship, because Trask informed him it had already been sold by the oceanic company to the Matson Line.

Bill for Referendum on Liquor Law as Filed by Rep. Sawyer

The bill seeking a referendum on modification of the Volstead act, and filed today in the Legislature by Representative Sawyer, is framed as follows:

For the purpose of ascertaining the will of the people of the Commonwealth concerning the modification of the federal Volstead Act, so as to modify the sale of liquors for beverage purposes when said liquor may contain more than one-half of one per centum alcohol, yet not be in fact intoxicating, and authorize the State to control and regulate the sale of alcoholic liquors for medicinal purposes, the secretary of the Commonwealth shall cause to be placed on the official ballot to be used at the next State election following the passage of this act, the following question: "Shall the federal Volstead Act be so modified by the federal Congress as to permit the sale of liquors for beverage purposes which contain more than one-half of one per centum alcohol, yet are not in fact intoxicating, and to authorize the States to regulate and control by State law the sale of all alcoholic liquors used for medicinal purposes?"

The votes upon said question shall be received, sorted, counted, declared and transmitted to the secretary of the Commonwealth, laid before the Governor and Council, and by them opened and examined, in accordance with the laws relating to votes for State officers as far as such laws are applicable.

The Governor shall make known the result by declaring the number of votes in the affirmative and the number on the negative, and shall transmit a statement of such result, in writing, to the General Court during the first week of the session in the year 1927.

If it shall appear that a majority of said votes are in the affirmative it shall be deemed and taken that the people of the Commonwealth favor the aforesaid modification of the Federal Volstead Act, and the clerks of the House and Senate shall so notify the several members of Congress and the two Senators of the State serving at Washington.

If it shall appear that a majority of the votes are in the negative, it shall be deemed and taken that the people of the Commonwealth are against the aforesaid modification of the Federal Volstead Act, and the clerks of the House and Senate shall so notify the several Congressmen from the State and the two Senators serving at Washington.

Wets Launch Campaign to Win Support of 15,000,000 Voters

Washington, May 28 (I.N.S.).—In the face of congressional opposition to their proposal for a Federal referendum on prohibition, Senate wets today laid plans for a drive to secure a vote upon modification of the national dry law from one-half the American electorate.

By placing "straight wet" tickets in several States in next November's elections and drives for State-wide referenda in a number of others, the wets hope to secure an expression of opinion on proposals to change the eighteenth amendment and Volstead Act, from voters representing at least 50,000,000 of the 110,000,000 population of the country.

The plan, having as its base the New York State referendum, would include election of "solidly wet" delegations to Congress from Massachusetts, New Jersey and Maryland and State referenda in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, California, Connecticut, Wisconsin, Montana and Nevada.

Agitation for such State ballots has been started in each of these, the wets declared, with excellent changes for success.

The significance of the plan is seen in a study of the 1924 election returns. These twelve States—representing only one-fourth of the Union—cast 15,186,274 votes in the last Presidential election, out of a total vote of 29,091,417.

ARMY MUTINY IN PORTUGAL

Paris, May 28 (A.P.)—Two army divisions in Portugal have mutinied, says a Havas Agency dispatch from Lisbon. One division was stationed in Northern Portugal and the other in the south.

The dispatch adds that the Premier has announced that the government will be able to dominate the situation.

London, May 28 (A.P.).—There has been intense political ferment in Portugal for the last fortnight on the question of the tobacco monopoly, regarding which the government has been accused of acting in a dictatorial and unconstitutional manner. Dr. Jose Domingues Dos Santos, addressing a recent meeting of the left Democrats, said there would either be a dismissal of the government or a revolution.

to break the famous candy man's will.

WILL TAKE STAND.

Stylishly attired in brown and black, with a mink collar adorning her fashionable Spring coat, the former "candy-counter girl" listened to her husband, I. Harold Angell, testify to conversations with Shaw. She is expected to be a witness in defence of the will in which she and Angell were the chief beneficiaries.

Angell told of the trip to Florida that Shaw and the Angells took early in 1924, ending with a rapid return to Boston, where Shaw, arriving on March 9, was rushed to Phillips House of Massachusetts General Hospital only to die the same night.

He declared that Shaw, after making his last will, told him on this trip of desiring to make special gifts of money and jewels to various persons who had befriended him, naming a list of those persons and giving it to Angell.

MAKING GIFTS.

Jewelry of Mrs. Shaw's and money of his own were to be used in making the gifts, according to Angell, but the latter explained that he has received nothing as yet from either of the two estates with which to carry out his benefactors' wishes.

"Do you think so-and-so would like a little money?" Shaw would ask as he mused over the list of friends he was making out, according to the witness, who also quoted Shaw as saying it would give him great enjoyment to see some of his friends get a little money.

was of a foreign cast and had a cap pulled well down over his eyes.

From the appearance of the girl, who had her eyes cast down on the bank, as if in deep thought, Constable Hayes did not believe she was aware of the watcher.

Today the constable was emphatic in declaring that the dress in the heap of clothing was the same dress he saw the mystery girl wearing.

GRUESOME SPOT.

It is a slow process draining the small pond, situated in the "honeymoon" section of Methuen, a heavily wooded terrain that, according to Chief Seiferth, has been the setting for several murders in the past and countless suicides, both by drowning and hanging.

Even the brook that runs out of the pond and through which the water of the pond is being released is called Bloody Brook. The brook empties into the Spicknit River, but the drainage of the pond is slow because the police fear an overflow and damage to gardens if it is forced too much.

PRINCE GUEST AT COOLIDGE DINNER

Washington, May 28 (A.P.)—Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, and his Princess, Louise Alexandra, had an opportunity today to see more of the capital which charmed them upon their arrival yesterday with its open spaces and rich green trees lining the streets.

"I have never seen a town quite so beautiful," said the Prince, "there are so many trees and so many open spaces. Every street seems to be shaded with trees. There is not a city in the world like it."

After the sight-seeing trip, including a visit to the Capitol, and another entertainment, the tall prince and his consort will be the guests of President and Mrs. Coolidge at a dinner to which Cabinet members and a number of high government officials have been invited. Other social engagements included luncheon with the British Ambassador and Lady Howard, and a reception at the home of John Hays Hammond.

The Prince will make his first public address in this country tomorrow at the unveiling of the memorial to his countryman, John Ericsson, inventor of the ironclad Monitor, which gave the Union forces in the Civil War supremacy at sea and marked the turning point in battleship construction throughout the world. President Coolidge will pay America's tribute to the inventor.

The Prince will lay the cornerstone of the John Morton Memorial Building on the Sesqui-Centennial Grounds at Philadelphia next Wednesday.

Prince to Spend Busy Three Days in Boston

Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, now in the United States, will devote three days to Boston next month, and his sojourn here, which will be a steady round of social engagements and official inspections,

HUB SOCIETY GIRL IS TO MARRY COUNT

SHE'LL BE A JUNE BRIDE

SAYS LOVE NOTE WAS ONLY SLIP OF HIS PEN

Miss Margaret Pettigrew, 34, Scottish-born Jamaica Plain resident, told the story of her alleged wrecked romance with Paul W. Guenther, 60, and a well-to-do real estate holder of the same section of the city, in Suffolk Superior Court today, where a jury is hearing testimony in her $25,000 heart balm suit.

The internationally flavored romance, according to Miss Pettigrew, reached its peak when she received a letter from Guenther in Germany which read:

"Be good until I return and love you again."

Guenther admitted writing the love passage, but said his pen slipped.

The real estate man testified he never loved the girl.

"I was friendly with her and always acted like a gentleman," Guenther testified.

The witness denied having first introduced his present wife, whom he married in Germany, as his niece when they arrived in this country in 1922. It was but a few months before that Guenther, according to Miss Pettigrew, promised to wed her and was accepted.

Testifying as to his meeting in Germany with his present wife, the witness said:

"I really don't know how I met her. It was in Leipsic."

Guenther denied having told the plaintiff he would mention her as "my intended wife" when he executed a will prior to his second marriage with the German girl.

At the death of his first wife Guenther came into possession of property valued at from $18,000 to $20,000, he testified.

He admitted transferring this property to Miss Elsa Johnson, his attorney's stenographer. Later he said, the property was again transferred, this time to his second wife.

THIRD VICTIM DIES IN MAILED BOMB PLOT

Muskegon, Mich., May 28 (A.P.)—Jeannette Krubasch, nineteen years old, died today, third victim of a mail bomb that exploded in the lobby of her father's hotel.

William R. Frank, twenty-two, of Chicago, who was to have been married Saturday to Miss Krubasch, was killed instantly, and August Krubasch, the girl's father, died shortly after the explosion.

Only one theory is held—that the bomb was mailed because of bitter political hatred of Krubasch, supervisor of Blue Lake Township.

"Mad Bandit?"

IN TOILS AT LAST
"Edward Corson" arrested in Lowell, is suspected finally to be Arthur [illegible] of Woonsocket, [illegible] bandit," who terrorized the Blackstone Valley after his escape from the asylum a year ago.

MAN IDENTIFIED AS 'TERROR'

A young man arrested by Lowell police under the name of Edward Corson of Brooklyn, has been identified through R. C. Hill, agent of the Massachusetts Department of Correction, as Arthur Rembad of Woonsocket, R. I., the "mad bandit," alleged to have terrorized the upper Blackstone Valley with hold-ups and automobile thefts since his escape from a Rhode Island hospital a year ago.

His arrest in Lowell followed a long chase, during which Patrolman J. A. Clark emptied his revolver at the stolen machine in which the man was attempting to get out of the city. On the outskirts of Lowell the machine was wrecked when it swerved and struck a telegraph pole.

He is now at the East Cambridge jail under $5,000 bond for appearance June 2 in Lowell District Court. According to records the youth was arrested in Woonsocket Feb. 8, 1924, for carrying a loaded revolver and is awaiting trial there on charges of breaking and entering and larceny.

$838,000 GIVEN TO FUND FOR NEWTON HOSPITAL

At the close of the fourth day of the campaign for $1,500,000 for new buildings and equipment at the Newton Hospital the grand total stood at $838,177. It was announced at the fourth report dinner at the Newton Armory. The women's division and the doctors' division have already rolled up a total far in excess of their quota. It was announced 30 members of the board of trustees had contributed jointly $140,000 to the building fund through the committee on special gifts, which has raised a total of $620,000 for the fund.

ARREST IN MAIL BOMB KILLINGS

Muskegon, Mich., May 28 (A.P.)—Asa K. Bartlett, Blue Lake Township constable and leader of the political opposition to August Krubasch, supervisor, was arrested today in connection with the bomb outrage that cost the lives of Krubasch, his nineteen-year-old daughter Janet and her fiance, William Frank, twenty-two, at Three Lakes Tavern.

Frank and the girl were to have been married tomorrow.

A year ago Krubasch, running for election as supervisor, encountered ignorous opposition from the Ku Klux Klan. He was defeated by [illegible] Norlin.

Last month Krubasch and his entire slate swept to an easy victory.

WARNS OF GOVERNMENT 'MEDDLING' IN COAL

Cincinnati, O., May 28 (A.P.)—Asserting the government is discriminating against the coal mining industry, Phil H. Penna, secretary of the Indiana Bituminous Coal Operators' Association, told the American Mining Congress the coal industry wanted only to be left alone to [illegible] problems. "If the government continues to 'meddle' in our business we are going to find ourselves in just the same condition as England now finds herself," he said. If things continue as they have been going, the government is going to have to subsidize coal operators so they can pay the miners their [illegible] prices."

GANG PROMISED TO LIST STOCK ON HUB CURB

Society Woman and a New York Business Man Leaders in $5,000,000 Swindle

New York, May 28 (A.P.)—An unnamed New York society woman is accused by police of membership in a gang of eighteen swindlers, which has fleeced investors throughout the United States out of $5,000,000 in a fake stock pool.

The pool's operations, disclosed with the arrest of Harry Axten of No. 726 Riverside Drive as he was entering the Cornell Club, were made possible by the society woman and a "well known New York business man," who is reported to have fled. It was said by Keyes Winter, deputy attorney-general.

Winter has been working on the case for the past six months.

The swindlers, it is alleged, made illegal pooling arrangements with corporations in need of financial assistance, promising to get their stock listed on the Boston Curb.

The victims were assured the stock would be boosted to high figures by means of wash sales, after which the owners could unload it on the public. The ring is said to have sold worthless mining and oil stock also.

The swindlers are said to have established a fake bank, the House Deposit Company, and to have employed the society woman and the "well known business man" to disarm suspicion.

marked "Dr. Work." This sign was found on that effigy:

"For breaking his word and depriving a project of water."

When the irrigation project was started the government ordered a construction charge which was to be paid over a number of years in addition to so much per acre. Later this charge was increased and many of the farmers failed to make payments.

The government refused to furnish water to delinquents until all past dues were paid. This the farmers decline to do, claiming the government should furnish the water until all irrigated lands are reclassified according to terms of the omnibus bill, recently signed by President Coolidge.

The farmers claim Mr. Work agreed to this delay, only to change his mind and demand payment of delinquent dues.

SKIPPER CALLED BY RADIO TO CHILD'S BIER

Dorchester Man Speeds Back From Fishing Trip as Daughter Is Killed

Over at the Fish Pier today more than a score of sun-tanned, seasoned men stumbled about the deck of the schooner Lark, forking dollars over the side in the shape of huge cod, but their usually merry faces were grim and sad and their usual gay quips were missing.

And out at No. 332 Talbot avenue, Dorchester, Captain Ernest Parsons, hardy skipper of the Lark, sat inside a little cracker-box bungalow, head in hands—still stunned at the tragedy that had snatched from him his eleven-year-old daughter, Ruth, pet of her father and the men of the Lark.

Just a week ago little Ruth, standing on the sidewalk opposite her home, was strolling to death beneath an auto truck.

The crew of the schooner was fishing off Sable Island when the tragedy occurred. Radio messages were at once sent out in efforts to reach Captain Parsons, but no ship that caught the signal was bound near the fishing craft.

Not until last Tuesday night, when the fishing schooner Angie Marshall, out of Boston, arrived on the Sable Banks, was the news broken to the skipper and his sorrow-stricken crew.

Captain Parsons at once broke down and retired to his cabin. Without awaiting his orders the crew silently hauled up anchor, made sail and headed home.

And so today, Captain Parsons sits alone with his dead in a darkened parlor, while his sorrowing crew mopes about the deck of the Lark that never again will know the light, happy skip of the little girl.

TRUCK DRIVER FREED IN DEATH OF ROXBURY BOY

Leo E. Ball of Mansfield, driver of a truck which fatally injured little Irving Hack of South Huntington avenue, Roxbury, was exonerated today by Judge Hayden in Roxbury court. The accident occurred near the child's home. Robert McHugh, chauffeur for Mayor Nichols, said he boy ran into the path of the truck and Ball did everything possible to avoid hitting him.

Hinman Says France Will Never Pay her yearly payments are to be short of this sum by about one hundred and forty million dollars, and, at best, they will fail to reach it by forty-five million dollars.

Therefore, not only does France pay a far lower rate of interest for the money than the United States paid to procure it for her, but she virtually DOES NOT PAY BACK THE PRINCIPAL AT ALL.

In no way can any calculation put America's loss below five or six thousand millions. If all losses be figured at compound interest throughout the sixty-two years of payment, the sum mounts to such colossal size as to be beyond ordinary comprehension.

PRINCE GUEST AT DINNER

will be featured by a reception open to the public.

Announcement of plans made today by Frederick K. Berg, secretary to Carl W. Johansson, Swedish consul in the Hub. The future king will arrive here in the late afternoon of June 17 and remain until the evening of June 20.

The public reception to the Crown Prince on Sunday afternoon, June 20, will be the biggest event in the history of Greater Boston for men, women and children of Swedish descent living here. Swedish organizations, some of them national in scope, will participate in the reception, and the speakers will be Governor Fuller, Mayor Nichols of Boston, Mayor Childs of Newton and Atty. Edgar O. Robson of Boston, legal adviser to the Swedish consul in Boston.

The public will be admitted on payment of 50 cents to the fund for the Swedish Home for Aged Persons. The celebration will take place on the grounds of the home in Waltham street, West Newton, under the auspices of the Swedish Charitable Society.

The Crown Prince and Princess on arriving in Boston will go direct to the Summer residence of T. Jefferson Coolidge, Beverly banker, at Pride's Crossing.

A motor trip along the shore to Portsmouth, N. H., will be taken June 18, and in the evening there will be an exclusive ball in his honor at the Coolidge estate.

On June 19 the Crown Prince and his consort will visit all the departments of Harvard University, the late Mrs. Jack Gardner's museum, Fenway Court, and the Boston Art Museum.

After the Sunday reception at West Newton, the royal entourage will leave for Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Dr. Carl Linquist is chairman of the committee in charge, assisted by Henry Ericsson, Consul Johansson, and Frederick K. Berg.

O. K.'S PETITION FOR SPORTS REFERENDUM

Secretary of State Declares the Question Can Be Voted on Unless Courts Prevent

Despite a blunder in the phraseology of the second batch of petitions for Sunday sports, the question will go on the ballots for a state referendum next Fall, so far as he is concerned, Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook said today.

He termed the faulty wording of the petitions a mere "technicality" which will not prevent a referendum unless a restraining order is issued by the courts.

The blanks in question contained a reference to Sunday baseball only.

They were issued and signed by 5,000 voters when the Legislature failed to act on a previous petition of 26,000 signers, asking for a referendum on Sunday sports. The latter blanks differed from the first 26,000 in that they referred to Sunday baseball only.

Discovery of this mistake gave rise to fears that the second petition may be illegal and may nullify the results of months of patient effort of proponents of Sunday sports. The 5,000 blanks have never been legally filled, it is said, because of the error in wording.

URGES SUPPORT OF AIR MAIL

Boston business men were urged today to support the air mail to be established between Boston and New York on July 1, in a statement issued by Horace W. Bar-- man of the committee on postoffice and postal facilities of the ... A Chamber of Commerce.

To make the amil route successful, the statement said, it will be necessary to ship 250 pounds of mail a day from this city. A campaign to spread information concerning the new airmail line is being planned by the chamber.

By providing for the delivery of mail in the big cities of the Middle West the day after it is posted, the statement continues, the new air line opens a new field of activity to New England business men.

MALDEN HERB PLANT BURNS

Smoke from fire in the grinding room of the Leslie Gould herb factory, Woodrow street, Malden, today routed scores of sleepinr residents of the "Mount" section, choking and coughing from their beds.

The blaze, believed to have been smouldering all night, broke forth shortly before 5 a. m. The small one and one-half story building was destroyed. The loss is estimated at $1,500.

Horseman Joseph Sullivan of the Maplewood station cut a three-inch gash in his left foot when leaping into his "night hitch" to answer the alarm. He stepped on a safety razor blade.

HOLD 9 TRAPPED IN RAID

Leominster, May 28.—Nine men trapped in a three-story factory in Crawford street when police seized 2,000 gallons of alcohol and a 2,000-gallon still, in the most spectacular raid in this section since the advent of prohibition, pleaded not guilty today in District Court to two charges of liquor violations. All are charged with the manufacture and keeping of liquor. Bail was fixed at $300 on each charge by Judge Ralph Robbins and the cases were continued to June 12.

The men arrested gave their names as: Charles Saunders, Roxbury; Martin F. Sandler, Boston; Charles Parker, Worcester; Morris Stahl, Worcester; Louis A. Fox, Worcester; Louis Gugliaro, Boston; Leroy Howard Stearns, Bath, Me.; George Friese, West Haven, Ct., and Joseph Brown, Philadelphia.

Stearns and Friese had been detained by Fitchburg police in connection with the Westboro payroll robbery. Both they were released after they satisfied police they were not implicated in the holdup.

The raiding party consisting of six officers, swooped down on the Crawford street factory in automobiles, trapping the nine occupants. The haul is one of the largest ever captured in this section and the still alone is valued at several thousand dollars.

VICTIMS' LIVES SAVED BY BIG POISON DOSE

Kansas City, May 28 (A.P.).—A poison plot directed against Circuit Judge E. E. Porterfield was revealed here today with analysis of a three-pound sample sack of pancake flour, which the jurist recently received through the mails. The flour contained a large amount of poison. Search is being made for a man, whom the authorities refused to name, on a charge of sending the poison through the mails.

The amount of poison inserted in the package of flour was so great that it nauseated the victims, giving relief, a smaller amount probably would have brought death. Judge Porterfield, his son, and Mrs. Porterfield were all seriously ill after eating pancakes made from the flour.

MEXICANS HOLD FIVE U. S. MEN

Mexico City, May 28 (A.P.).—Federal troops in the State of Vera Cruz have been dispatched with orders to exterminate the bandits headed by Vidal Tenoria and rescue John J. Shanklin of Canyon, Tex., one of the five Americans now in the hands of outlaws in various parts of Mexico.

The Mexican authorities probably were spurred in their efforts to rescue Shanklin because the bandits had set 6 p. m. Thursday for the killing of the American sugar plantation worker if a ransom of 20,000 pesos had not been received at that hour.

Two other Americans were taken in the Tampico oil region and at last accounts were being held for ransom or death. They are oil drillers named Briggs and Greeley.

In addition to Shanklin, Briggs and Greeley there are in the hands of outlaws C. G. Boden of Laredo, Tex., a mine owner, and Mining Engineer Gallagher. Both of them are held somewhere in the State of Durango.

DEPOSED BISHOP LOSES ROUND IN LEGAL FIGHT

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—Another step in the efforts of William Montgomery Brown, deposed Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, to regain his ecclesiastic standing through court action has been nailed. The former Bishop, pasted for heresy, sought a court order reinstating him, but Supreme Court Justice Lydon vacated service of summons and complaint on William W. Skiddy as treasurer of "the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States of America." In his petition for dismissing the summons Mr. Skiddy asserted there is no such organization as "the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States of America." That the Protestant Episcopal Church" owns no property and that he handles funds only for expenses of the triennial conventions. It further said the church itself had no power to depose or reinstate a Bishop, such power "inhering only in the House of Bishop."

FILM EVENT IN THEIR LIVES

Scores of sick kiddies, ranging from three to twelve years of age, who are afflicted with heart trouble and kindred ailments, were entertained at House of the Good Samaritan, Roxbury, by the Boston Evening American when they witnessed the feature comedy picture "That's My Baby."

As most of the children there are too ill to leave this excellent, non-sectarian institution, the picture was shown in one of the large wards by special arrangement with Metropolitan Theatre, where it is being displayed to the public all this week.

Seated in their little white beds, with pillows propped against their backs, the young boys and girls viewed the screamingly funny antics of Douglas MacLean and the four-year-old youngster from whom the title of the picture is derived. Forgetting their ailments they laughed to their heart's content for nearly two hours. It was a big event for them.

"Their temperatures generally go up after an event of this nature" said Miss Lillian H. Morris, acting superintendent, "but we find that it does not harm them. On the contrary it does them good. They will talk about this picture for a long time. It was very good of the Boston Evening American and Metropolitan Theatre to give the children this entertainment and we are very grateful."

The kiddies at Home for Jewish Children, Canterbury street, Dorchester, saw the picture today in their institution. It banished dull care from their lives as it has from those of thousands of other kiddies in Greater Boston institutions during the past two weeks.

A Flint limousine, contributed through courtesy of General Manager Herbert L. Bailey and Manager William R. Frederick of Boston Flint Company has been used by representatives of this newspaper and the theatre in getting to and from the institutions.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Elvira Boardman Marries William H. Potter, Jr., at Trinity Church

Photographs by Bachrach.

CHARITY WORKERS

Mrs. Chandler Gifford (left) and Mrs. Eliot Hubbard, Jr., two Cambridge matrons working for Neighborhood House and its annual fete day, to be staged at the Henry W. Longfellow estate June 4.

A LOVELY GIRLISH bride, in the simplest of white satin and tulle, Miss Elvira Boardman was a dainty figure in the vastness of old Trinity Church when she said the marriage lines which made her Mrs. William H. Potter, Jr.

FROTHY TULLE held low on her fluffy dark hair by orange blossoms, and a square ended court train of satin, water white in tint, were the more stately notes of a bridal frock sparingly short and unadorned. The bride's bouquet was a huge cluster of cream roses and their dark green foliage.

ATTENDANTS THREE in number escorted the bride, whose father, Mr. Edwin A. Boardman, gave her in marriage. Miss Isabel Boardman was honor maid and two young girls of school years, Sorita and Christina Bartlett (small cousins of the bride) were flower girls.

MAUVE AND ECRU, softly blended, were becomingly effective tints worn by Miss Isabel Boardman. A wide transparent hat weighted with bright blossoms, a shoulders sash of chiffon and ecru lace, a chiffon frock with scrt lace hem, and buckled satin shoes made a delicately lovely ensemble.

THE FLOWER GIRLS wore crisp muslin frocks of mauve and small bonnets, poke shaped, also of mauve. Their bouquets were the formal nosegays in stiff paper holders, rows of gay blossoms to contrast with the purplish-pink of their frocks and bonnets.

MRS. EDWIN A. BOARDMAN, in deep brown satin gown and hat; Mrs. Gerald A. Boardman in chiffon smartly designed and done in bois de rose; Mr. Reginal Boardman; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Goodrich, the latter in rich wrap and wide hat, were of the Boardman family connections at Trinity for the ceremonial.

DANCING BY LANTERN light is a feature designed to interest the young set at the Lawn Fete in the Longfellow estate at Cambridge on June 4, for which all Cambridge society is enrolled and by which an old Cambridge philanthropic institution (during of many a matron) the Neighborhood House, benefits.

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE'S dramatics club does some of the popular old-fashioned dances on the greensward for the afternoon hours and in the evening, by candle light, presents a pantomime, "Harlequinade." Dancers from the Denishawn aggregation, Miss Dana Sievyling and Miss Lillian Duncan, do two numbers.

THE HENRY W. LONGFELLOW estate, known to thousands of admirers in its stately Brattle street environment, is a magnet sure to draw many a visitor for the afternoon or evening. Added to this is a full to overflowing program of amusements.

MRS. HAROLD REED, Mrs. Eliot Hubbard, Jr., Mrs. Chandler Gifford and ever so many others of the Cambridge important world are working for the fete headed of course by Mrs. Charles J. Amy and her small band of assistants. It's to be, by all odds, the largest thing ever staged for Neighborhood House.

CARDS HAVE GONE out from the School of the Museum of Fine Arts for its fiftieth exhibition, June 2 through June 4, from ten in the morning until five in the afternoon. Tea will be served on June 2, in the last two hours of the afternoon.

STUDENTS OF THE Museum's School are known in many lands for their attainments in the arts—and many an artist has started up fame's ladder with study at the Museum school as his background. This year's set, so they say, boasts many whose future is rosy with promise.

MRS. ALBERT L. REGISTER and Mrs. David Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Morss and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Sawyer are some of Newport's transients, staying briefly in the pretty Rhode Island city before it awakens to its brilliant Summer life. They are at the La Forge Cottages on Touro Park.

REV. AND MRS. GEORGE GRENVILLE MERRILL of Stockbridge are at the La Forge over the weekend. The Rev. Mr. Merrill plans a summer abroad, but Mrs. Merrill and the young members of the family, George Grenville Merrill, Jr. Miss Marjorie Merrill and Miss Natalie Merrill, will summer at Newport.

9 COUPLES IN 'EARLY TO WED' CONTEST

Honeymoon Prize for Longest Married; Open to All New England

The "Early to Wed" Editor of the Boston Evening American, after a four days' quest for the New England couple who have been married the longest, submits the following sure and "startin'" recipe for living to a ripe old age:

1.—Marry early.
2.—Marry in Massachusetts.
3.—Stay in Massachusetts.

The Evening American, co-operating with the management of Loew's State Theatre, where the film-play "Early to Wed" will entertain thousands all next week, wants to send the "longest married" couple on a second honeymoon tour, to either Niagara Falls or Washington, all expenses to be paid by newspaper and theatre.

Assigned to the pleasant task of finding the couple, and having been reading recently of golden wedding here and there in New England, the "Early to Wed" Editor expected to hear from three or four couples of golden weddingers. Instead he has been placed in touch with NINE couples who already have celebrated their golden weddings.

And, here is the interesting fact, all eighteen of these fine and vigorous old folks reside in Massachusetts!

They make their homes in Whitman, Allston, Danvers Highlands, Pepperell, Somerville, Middleboro, Orange, Berlin and Medford.

All were married in Massachusetts.

All have lived here throughout their married life.

If you have not done so, and if you know an aged couple who you believe have been married longer than any other couple in New England, please send in their names without delay. Should they prove to be the winners of the Boston Evening American-Loew's State Theatre "second honeymoon" trip, your reward will be Ten Dollars in Gold and a box for one presentation of "Early to Wed." Kathryn Perry, Zasu Pitts and Matt Moore are the featured players of this drama of married life, which is said to be one of the most entertaining film offerings of the year.

Our venerable friends, the couple who have been longest married, will have their choice between Washington and Niagara Falls. They will travel first class, stop at the best hotels, be waited on "hand and foot."

The "Early to Wed" contest will close on Tuesday next. Names and addresses of the winners will be announced immediately. The conditions of qualifications are only two: (1) the couple must have been married in New England; (2) they must be residents of New England.

The "second honeymoon" tour will be taken early in the month of weddings. June, the weather man intimates, will be sunny and warm. Judging by the facts already disclosed, "Early to Wed" is the right idea. Please address communications to "Early to Wed" Editor, Boston Evening American, No. 8 Winthrop square.

HAVANA GREETS AIRMEN IN N. Y.-BUENOS AIRES TRIP

Havana, May 28 (I.N.S.)—The Argentine aviators, Bernardo Duggan and Eduardo Olivero, arrived here in the seaplane Buenos Aires at 9:50 this morning from Miami, Florida, completing, without mishap, the fourth leg of their flight from New York to Buenos Aires. A huge crowd gathered to watch them descend, and they were received with shouts of wild enthusiasm.

REDUCTION FARE RATES FOR VACATION PERIOD

The Boston & Maine Railroad today announced a reduction in rates for Summer vacationists. Whether for week-end trips or longer, the reduced rates will be available for round trips between principal cities and resort places on the road. These round-trip reduced rates are almost generally 10 per cent. lower than the one-way fare, are available on all trains at any time, and are distinct from the excursion rates for special events.

RIVAL BAPTISTS DECLARE TRUCE

Washington, May 28 (A.P.).—A resolution providing for a six months' truce on controverted subjects between fundamentalists and modernists of the Northern Baptist Church was adopted today by the church's convention.

"The main contention has been with us to separate the church from the State, not only legally, but in fact," he declared. "The Mexican government is only trying now to enforces existing laws to control the political activities of the small group of the heirarchy of the Catholic church or any other church which may have a similar program.

"There is no attempt to interfere with religious liberty at all. On the contrary, the government is determined to protect the liberty of worship by keeping out of politics entirely so as to leave every person free on matters pertaining to human conscience."

JAIL AND FINES FOR CAR CRASH

Eugene Pinsonneault's wild ride along the Arlington-Winchester road, ended when his auto crashed into a trolley car, setting fire to both, had its aftermath in Woburn district court today. Judge Morton imposed stiff sentences on the motorist, who lives in Concord, N. H.

Pinsonneault was fined $100 for driving away from the scene of an accident; $25 for driving so as to endanger lives, then sentenced to three months in the House of Correction for driving while drunk and three months for driving recklessly. He appealed and was held in $3,000.

Arlington police officers punctured the gasoline tank of Pinsonneault's car with revolver bullets when the Concord man refused to halt his speeding car near the Winchester Country Club.

'MEDIUM' AND GEMS VANISH

Portsmouth, N. H., May 28 (A.P.)—A "medium" who promised to relieve women of their troubles, but instead relieved them of jewelry and money, was being sought today by Portsmouth police.

"Pauline," the medium, who claimed to be Thomas Purfini of Newburyport, Mass., has suddenly left town. He took with him diamond rings, quantities of other jewelry and gold pieces, on which he was to have laced a magic charm for his now disillusioned clients.

Purfini, a dark man of medium height, hired a room, distributed cards urging, "See Pauline with your troubles" and then was swamped with business. Women, particularly, went to him with problems of love, business and health. Young girls were said by the police to have been heavy sufferers. He remained here only a week. When the police were called in today three women clients appeared in search of him.

APPEALS FOR LARGER FEDERAL SUBSIDIES

Cleveland, O., May 28 (A.P.)—An appeal for more Federal subsidies for State health work and for ratification of the Child Labor Amendment was made before the national conference of social work today by Richard Arthur Bolt, assistant professor of child hygiene at the University of California.

Dr. Bolt discussed what he termed a pronounced wave of individualism and asserted that this individualism has manifested itself in disrespect for law and diffident attitude toward the problems of neighbors.

GIRL RUN OVER BY TRUCK NEAR DEATH IN HOSPITAL

Doris Murray, 15, of No. 39 Middle street, South Boston, was run over by an express truck, operated by Harold E. Crossley of Roxbury, while she was crossing Preble street. Patrolman Arthur Sawyer, on traffic duty at Andrews Square, took the girl to the City Hospital where it was found that she was suffering from a fractured skull, multiple contusions and abrasions. Her name was placed on the danger list.

GUILD BIG AID IN CHARITY

By JAMES WALSH.

Members of the Immaculate Conception branch, Massachusetts Catholic Women's Guild, will hold their final charity bridge and whist of the season tonight in Board of Trade hall, Central square, Cambridge. Many souvenirs have been donated.

This branch and the guild generally has done much in contributing to the welfare of Catholic institutions in the archdiocese.

The nineteenth anniversary of Rose Croix Council, No. 1,321, Knights of Columbus, one of the largest connected with the State branch, will be observed with a banquet Wednesday evening, June 9, in Rose Croix Hall, No. 152 Dudley street, Roxbury.

Invitations have been extended to former U. S. Senator David I. Walsh, Edward F. McSweeney, the Very Rev. Joseph N. Dinand, S. J., president of Holy Cross College; national and State officers of the Knights of Columbus and State and city officials.

The committee in charge includes John P. White, chairman; Thomas J. Colleran, John W. Crowley, Charles W. Goode, Francis P. Kelley, Charles W. Foley, Dr. F. W. Nash, Joseph P. Sheehan, James W. Hennigan, Joseph H. McElroy, William F. Doolan, John J. Kelley, grand knight; Dr. A. Reynolds, Michael P. Dempsey, Joseph C. Devine, William F. Sullivan, Leroy C. Hodges, Joseph C. Parker, James H. Brawley, Walter J. Connell, past grand knight; Francis A. Willhauck, John F. Dawd, William J. Hogan, C. R. Connell and Thomas F. Phelan.

Members of the Confraternity of the Holy Cross will attend a meeting and services at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross at 3 p. m. today. The services will consist of the Way of the Cross and Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The 4 o'clock mass in the Cathedral this morning was celebrated for the members of the confraternity.

Hold Man for Bad Check

Portsmouth, N. H., May 28.—Joe Lebreton of Attleboro, Mass., was arrested by Patrolman Pierce on Daniels street on the charge of passing worthless checks. When taken into custody Lebreton had three revolvers on his person, police say.

THREE KENTUCKY SLAYERS PAY PENALTY IN CHAIR

Eddyville, Ky., May 28 (A.P.)—Within less than an hour three men, one a negro, were electrocuted at the State Penitentiary today.

The men were Elisha Sloan, thirty-one, convicted of having killed Dr. Marving Kingins; Ed Lake, thirty-two, Louisville, who killed his wife and Mrs. Mary Smith, then shot himself four times in an effort to end his own life, and John Baker, thirty-four, negro, convicted of killing his wife.

All three of the men walked quietly and calmly to the chair.

U. S. TO PROTEST ATTACKS BY CHINESE RADICALS

Peking, May 28 (I.N.S.).—The American government is preparing to file a protest with the government at Canton regarding outrages perpetrated by the Chinese on American individuals, property and missions, it was intimated here today. Acting under orders from Washington, F. L. Mayer, counsellor of the American legation here, left for Canton to consult with consular officers there concerning the outrages. Particular attention will be paid, it is understood, to the attacks on missions, several having actually been confiscated by the radicals.

JUNGLE BEASTS TO FACE MRS. FIELD'S CAMERA

Chicago, May 28 (A.P.).—The treasure of Brazil's jungles, specimens of flora and fauna in the Andes Mountains and the lower reaches of the Amazon will be the goal of the Marshall Field expedition of the Field Museum, which sails in three weeks.

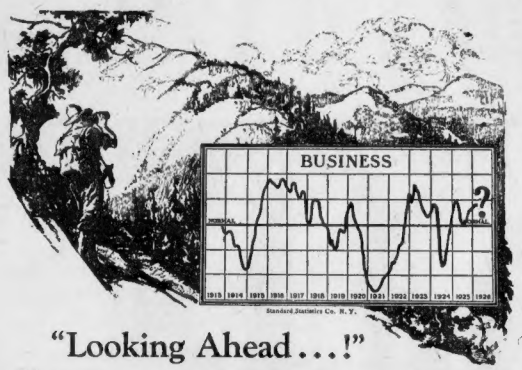
Animals, geological specimens and botanical prizes from the wilds of Central and Southern Brazil and other countries will be collected by the party.

Mrs. Marshall Field will be official photographer and Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton historian.

TWO AMERICAN BISHOPS APPOINTED BY POPE

Rome, May 28 (A.P.).—Pope Pius has promoted to the vacant see of Richmond, Va., the Right Rev. Andrew J. Brennan, auxiliary bishop of Scranton, Pa., and the Rev. John J. Mitty of New York bishop of Salt Lake City to succeed the late Bishop Glass.

NEW ENGLAND'S LARGEST TRUST COMPANY



"Looking Ahead . . . !"

THE ranger who patrols the trackless forest knows the value of studying the contour of the country through which he must pass. At each point of vantage he can foresee the difficulties which must be overcome and govern his preparations and plan of action accordingly.

Your problem as a business man is more complex. The peaks and valleys of the graphic chart of business conditions cannot be forecast with certainty. To descend unprepared into one major depression might result in financial disaster.

When conditions are good, it is often well to withdraw a portion of your funds from the hazards of your business. These funds, if entrusted to us in the form of a Living Trust, would produce an income that would permit you to pass safely through a prolonged period of depression without undue privation or hardship to your family or yourself.

The personal equation enters largely into our Trust Department relations, and our officers will be glad to explain the nature of our service as trustee under a Living Trust.

A copy of our booklet, "CONCERNING TRUSTS AND WILLS," will be sent, upon request. It discusses this subject in detail

MANCHESTER BOY INJURED BY AUTO

Manchester, N. H., May 28.—Emile, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Demers of No. 187 Hanover street was injured when he was struck by an automobile driven by W. E. Bentley of No. 406 Hanover street.

BYRD PREPARES FOR SOUTH POLE

London, May 28 (I.N.S.).—Lieutenant-Commander Richard E. Byrd, American explorer who circled the North Pole in an airplane several times, arrived here from Spitzbergen today on the steamer Chantier.

Byrd admitted he was making plans for a flight to the South Pole. He said it would be more difficult than that already accomplished because the southern end of the earth is on an elevation, 10,000 feet high, and would require an airplane capable of making a longer flight.

SCORE BEAT ON NORGE FILMS

Seattle, Wash., May 28 (Universal).—Overcoming obstacles that at times appeared wholly insurmountable, International Newsreel received here the first actual motion and still pictures of Amundsen's arrival at Teller, Alaska, from his epochal trip from King's Bay, Spitzbergen, over the North Pole and the vast Arctic wastes.

Prior to the departure of Amundsen from Spitzbergen International Newsreel had stationed a camera man at Nome, Alaska. When Amundsen sailed away into the unknown, International Newsreel engaged an aviator to fly from Fairbanks to Nome, a distance of 600 miles.

During the period that Amundsen and the Norge were "lost," the cameraman at Nome flew to Teller, where motion pictures were made of the arrival of the Norge. With these films and others of the flight, the Newsreel man flew back to Nome and thence over the 600 miles to Fairbanks.

Airplanes were engaged which carried the films from Fairbanks to Skaguay, Alaska, 750 miles, where the Newsreel man were able to catch the Steamer Princess Mary en route from Juneau to Vancouver.

A seaplane put out from Vancouver, picked up the Princess Mary at Albert Bay, 240 miles from Vancouver, took the Amundsen negatives and flew with them to Seattle.

There picture and still prints of the Norge were made and sent by plane to San Francisco and Los Angeles, while the negatives were sent East.

BARRING CHILDREN FROM CRIME MOVIES URGED

Blaming the movies for poisoning the minds of children in regard to crime and sex irregularities, Assistant District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell of Middlesex County, speaking at the Metropolitan Driving Club, advocated the passage of a law prohibiting children from attending movies in which violations of law are painted in attractive colors.

Stories of Air Is to Be Told in the Films

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, May 28.—I am wondering if the title, "The Big Parade of the Air," will be an asset or a drawback in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's air special.

Many months ago—about the time I may say, that "The Big Parade" created such a sensation, Byron Morgan wrote an original story called "Thunder in the Air," and those who have read the scenario say it has some thrills duplicated anywhere on land or sea.

King Vidor

Another question is also being discussed. King Vidor would be a fine choice for the air picture, which is to be released as a special, and John Gilbert would be ideal for the air pilot, but whether M. G. M. will consider it good business to repeat with them in the air picture I do not know.

WHILE I am on the subject of air pictures, I met John Monk Saunders, author of "Wings," at a dinner party. "Wings" is the famous Players-Lasky air story and since it will go into production about the same time as "Thunder in the Air" it will be interesting to see which one is finished first. Mr. Saunders says that Famous Players-Lasky is conducting a minute search for a leading man and in his opinion there is a place for a blonde youth on the screen with personality, a fine physique and acting ability.

THERE are few studios at this present moment in Hollywood or elsewhere as busy as the Fine Arts. A visit there disclosed the fact that eight separate companies were burning Klieg lights at one time. On one set John Ince was making one of a series of eight he is to do for the El Bee Company. This one he calls "Conscience," and the cast consists only four people. Mr. Ince acts and directs as well and the rest of the members of this exclusive company are Grace Diamond, Herbert Rawlinson and Arthur Jasmine. The entire series, Mr. Ince says, is of the blood and thunder variety.

Grace Darmond

ON another set at Fine Arts Studio, Colleen Moore is now finishing selling limburger cheese in "Delicatessen" and preparing after a few weeks' rest to begin work on "Twinkle Toes." Thomas Burke's story, Charles Brabin has been chosen to direct her. As for a leading man—well, Colleen says they are scarcer than the proverbial hen's teeth.

WHILE on the leading man question, Irving Thalberg, John Roberts and Josephine Lovett are searching the highways and byways for a tall Scotsman, brawny and young, to play in "Annie Laurie," opposite Lillian Gish. The picture goes into production June 14.

ALLAN DWAN'S friends in California may see him out here sooner than they expect, as a little bird tells me that he has signed a contract with the Fox Company to join their directorial force. He has "The Tin God," Thomas Meighan's present picture, and one more for Famous Players-Lasky to complete before the expiration of his contract—and then it will be Fox and California for Allan, if my information is correct.

Death Case Continued

The case of William A. Blunt of No. 128 Summer street, Malden, who is charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of 10-months old Florence Scibelli on Pearl street, Malden, was continued to June 3.

WHY IN JAIL IF NOT AT YALE?

New Haven, Ct., May 28.—Basing their appeal on the action of Yale University authorities in abandoning required attendance at religious service, prisoners at New Haven jail have petitioned the county commissioner to abolish weekday, compulsory chapel in the jail.

The protest was made public today by a man who has just finished a term.

The petition as exhibited by the released prisoner is couched in the same language as the petition of Yale students that won the abolition of compulsory chapel at the university. The same arguments are employed. Prisoners further point out that it is unfair to take advantage of men incarcerated.

BLOCK IN PEABODY IS DAMAGED BY FLAMES

Peabody, May 28.—Fire believed to have started from a cigarette butt damaged several offices in the Thom as Block, Peabody square, today. The blaze started in a washroom on the second floor of the three-story brick and wood structure and was discovered by Atlin F. French, owner of a drug store on the first floor.

The loss was estimated by fire department officials at $5,000. American Legion quarters and rooms of the Senatorial on the top floor were damaged as were the offices of City Solicitor James A. Lincoln, Dr. Harry Leavitt and Attorney William H. Fay on the second floor. French's drug store, the Peabody Tire and Supply company and Peabody Co-operative Bank on the first floor suffered losses.

The RED LAMP by Mary Roberts Rinehart

Author of "THE BAT"

A Great Story Written by America's Greatest Woman Writer

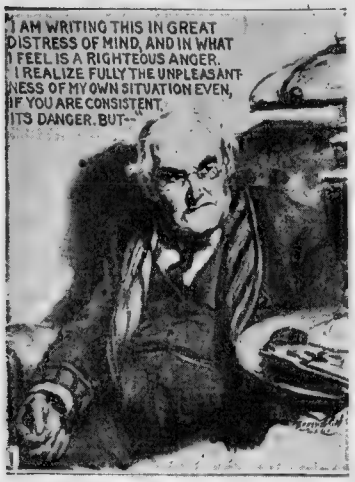
A Paper That Goes Into the Home, Dependable, Fearless, Entertaining and Instructive.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

IF A MONEY PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK

BOSTON, FRIDAY, MAY 28, 1926

SECOND SECTION



(Portrait of the Professor from a painting done in oil especially for this serial by W. D. Stevens.)

The last letters of old Horace Porter revealed that he was menaced by some monstrous wickedness.

Professor William A. Porter, married, childless, is left Twin Hollows, a shore and country estate, by his uncle, Horace Porter. The house is reputed haunted. Mrs. Porter appears to be mediumistic. Edith, a niece, in love with Warren Halliday, drags them to Twin Hollows to spend the Summer. Then things began to happen. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER V.

June 27

I HAVE found Uncle Horace's letter, and in a manner so curious that there can be, it seems to me, but two interpretations of it. One is that, somehow, I have had all along a subconscious knowledge of its presence behind the drawer. But I hesitate to accept that. I am orderly by instinct, and when I went over the desk after the dreadful moment of a paper caught behind the drawer would have sent me after it.

The other explanation is that I received a telepathic message. It came, as I say, in my messages point one, not from outside but from within. I heard nothing, it welled up above the incoherent and vague wanderings of a mind not definitely in action in a clear cut and definite form. Take out the bottom drawer on the right."

But if I am to accept telepathy, I am to believe that I am not alone in my knowledge of this letter. Yet considering the tone of it, the awful possibility it indicates who could have such a knowledge and yet keep it to himself?

How did it get behind the drawer? If the brownish smudge on the corner turns out to be blood, and I think it is, then it was placed in the drawer after he died. Annie Cochran and Thomas both deny having seen any paper about. The doctor, perhaps? But would he not have read it first?

It had been crumpled into a ball as I threw into the drawer and the subsequent opening of the drawer had pushed it back, out of sight. So much is clear.

But--after he fell

Is It Murder?

Suppose--and in the privacy of this Journal I may surely let my imagination wander--suppose then, that some other hand picked up the paper, ignorant of its contents and in a hurried attempt to put the room in order, flung it into the drawer? Or toward the waste basket beside it, and it fell short? Suppose, in a word, that he was not alone when he died? Suppose that some other hand again turned out the desk light and the others and somehow overlooked the red lamp in the [illegible] to see the way to open?

[illegible] my nerves run away with me. Murder is an ugly word and utter ill was have Horace Porter's record of death by heart failure. But a sufficient shock, or a fright might have brought that on. Fright even for the poor old chap was frightened when he wrote the letter. Perhaps [illegible] nothing. That was also true.

I realize [illegible] unpleasantness of my own situation even, if you are consistent, its danger. But--

But what? But in spite of this I shall do as I have threatened, proceed.

I am profoundly moved tonight. We did not love one another, but he was old and alone, and menaced by some monstrous wickedness. Just what that wickedness was no one can say, but I fully believe tonight that he died of it.

This morning I went with Edith to the main house, she to select some odds and ends for the boat house, against Halliday's coming, and I to clear out the library desk, to have it moved to the lodge.

Edith was in high spirits as I unlocked the front door, and was gravely telling Thomas, who accompanied us that we had seen a blue light under Clara's bed the night before. [illegible]

TWO MEN BURNED BY BLAST IN GAS OVEN

Worcester, May 28.—Frederick A. Warren, a foreman, and Edwin Allen a helper, in the asbestos plant of the F. S. Horton Corporation, were blown fifteen feet by an explosion in the baking room. Both were burned about the face and hands.

The force of the explosion ripped two heavy steel doors from the big ovens. So far it has been impossible to determine the cause of the blast. The baking room is a one-story brick structure adjoining the main plant.

'OUTLAWED' MEN TO RETURN

U. S. Speeds Plans to Permit Entry of Foreign-Born Who Fought in War

Washington, May 28 (Universal).—The bars that for years have prevented ten thousand foreign born American World War veterans from returning to the United States were officially let down at 12.01 o'clock this morning.

Moving with dispatch, the State Department officially notified American consuls in every port in the world by cable that soldiers who fought under the Stars and Stripes during the World War can now come back to America without waiting for places in the immigration quota.

The Recon-Reed-Johnson bill, permitting the repatriation of these soldiers, which was sponsored by the Hearst newspapers, was signed yesterday by President Coolidge. Telegrams from Secretary of State Kellogg told the representatives of the American government [illegible] consular officials were instructed to exert every effort to notify former American soldiers of their rights under the new law.

At the same time the foreign service was told by the State Department to be as liberal as possible in the interpretation of the provisions of the measure.

The first contingent of former soldiers and their families are permitted to enter under the act is expected by office as to sail from Italy within two weeks.

There are five thousand veterans in Italy alone affected by the measure, one thousand of this number were wounded in battle.

State Department officials estimate that approximately 20,000 persons, including the families of the veterans, will be permitted to return to America under the new law.

THEATRE MAN'S BOOZE SEIZED IN TRANSIT

Augusta, Me., May 28.—William P. Gray, owner of many New England theatres, started some of his choice liquors over the road by automobile from his home in Lewiston to his Summer home at Island Park. The liquor never reached there for State highway police seized the truck and its contents which were turned over to Sheriff John N. Eastman.

The liquor included Scotch, gin and champagne. Two men who were aboard the truck were released when Gray admitted they did not know what the contents of the shipment were.

Booths for Veterans

In the drive in Medford to have war veterans file certified copies of their discharges with the city clerk, special booths are to be designated where the veterans may have their copies sworn to by a notary public.

BOBS SPLIT WOMEN'S CLUBS

Two Shorn Candidates Tangle Affairs Where Leaders Have Long Locks

Atlantic City, N. J., May 28 (A.P.).—Faced with the nomination of two "bobbed" hair board members, who, if successful, will be the first on the board, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, with a membership rigorously unbobbed, is wondering if the powers that be will "stand for it."

Bobbed hair will surmount the brains of the club-woman of the future, those short skirts will hasten her forward steps, in the opinion of various leaders questioned by the Associated Press. Tolerance, energy and humor are necessary traits, they said, but the question is whether today's tolerance is sufficiently developed to welcome today's "bobs" to the board.

2 ARE BOBBED.

"An older woman who would bob her hair betrays a frivolity incompatible with serious accomplishments," an old-timer said.

"A leader of women must be willing to sacrifice minor personal whims for the sake of her station," said another.

The two bobbed nominees are Mrs. H. G. Reynolds of Indiana, Kansas, who is thus far unopposed for federation treasurer, and Mrs. Oakley W. Cooke of Tadwell, N. J., former state chairman of music, promoted for national music chairman. Mrs. Cooke has bobbed her hair since her candidacy.

More favorable opinions on the "bob" follow.

"The crusading spirit, held within bounds," Mrs. Gilbert Dayton of Windsor, Vt., chairman of legislation, named as an essential of the club woman. "I don't think it makes any difference what she does to her hair."

ALL TO BOB.

"I believe we'll all be bobbed fifty years from now," said Mrs. Joseph P. Friend, Louisiana, State Federation director on the board. "As in the 'fight streak' sometimes deplored in club women, it is a great leveler in a little nonsense now and then."

"Different times, different customs," quoted Mrs. State president, Mrs. R. B. Furman of Sumter, S. C., one of the younger women.

"It's not the hair but what's under it that counts," said Mrs. Lavina G. Parks, delegate from Osawatomie, Kas.

DRIVER HURT WHEN TRUCK HITS 'L' CAR

David Herman of No. 28 Brookview street, Dorchester, a chauffeur of an automobile truck owned by the Porter Brothers market of Harvard street, Brookline, was seriously injured when his truck was in collision with a sedan and an "L" car on Commonwealth avenue, at Everett street, Brighton.

GARDENS FOR OLD AGE

LOVE your garden even if it is only a wee strip, love it and name it and make it bloom in many colors.

A garden will be a joy to you at any time of life and a joy old age will not rob you of

I have always loved flowers. I never can bear to have no flowers, and flowers in great masses fill me with an emotional, keen delight.

During the war - Winters, when I was an exile from my invaded home, when the Germans occupied Bucharest and we moved the court to Jassy in the north of Roumania, I used to fill my house with miniature flowers in Winter being an unknown luxury in that far-off Moldavian town.

But now I have become a real gardener and all gardeners are fraternal to each other. They all speak the same language—the language of flowers and colors and of lovely or curious names.

"Do you know that new rose, 'Padre'?"

"Oh, yes, such a beautiful color"

"And how are your dahlias this year?"

"Gorgeous. But the strawberries had too much rain."

"Have you heard of that new, bright blue delphinium invented by the man in Germany——"

And thus, on and on, never matter if you come from Chicago, Boanla or Timbuctoo'

Old people are never cross or quarrelsome with each other when they talk of gardens. Exquisite visions float before their eyes and they veritably smell the sweet scent of their jasmine, verbena, lilies and honeysuckle. They are ready to give advice and cuttings, bulbs and roots because the other man has touched a same chord which vibrates in the part of his heart which cannot age.

Everything will not grow in my country. It is too hot in Summer, too cold in Winter but I am learning what will do well in that particular climate. What is more, I find that in many times have I wandered through all the fairy beauty I mean to create, and it makes me feel neighborly and hospitable like nothing else. I want everybody to come and have a look at my garden and rejoice over it with me. Their appreciation heightens my pleasure, and I think of how, when quite old, I shall sit out in the sunshine and bless the work my hands did when they were young

NAVY-CORNELL CREWS DRILL ON CHARLES COURSE

Middy Crews Display Power in Workout

By TED LYNCH

The crews of Cornell and the Navy worked out on the Charles today in preparation for their quadrangular regatta with Harvard and Technology tomorrow evening. The middies men's boat in its first appearance on the river was the speediest working shell that has been seen in these parts in a long time. Well trained, husky and powerful, lacked precision.

Tomorrow's race marks the first appearance of the Navy and Cornell boats in this section this season. The former comes here with a wealth of praise from crew experts throughout the country. The fifth oar boat is unknown as far as competition is concerned, all the reports from the New York college have been none too startling.

To pick the winner of tomorrow's spin down the basin seems easy, as the Navy is rated as the first most rowing shell in the East. The Middies have swept beaten Technology, rated as the stiffest opponent tomorrow, and should have little trouble in defeating Harvard and the mystery crew, Cornell.

In addition to the victory over Technology, the big Navy eight has beaten the varsity crews from Pennsylvania and Syracuse. Both last week defeated Technology and Harvard on the same course as will be rowed tomorrow.

Despite the wonderful record and reputation of the Annapolis crew there are not a few who will stand financially and otherwise behind the latter contenders tomorrow. Even at Harvard the rowing enthusiasts are looking for a much improved eight to turn in Stevens varsity at. The Crimson crew has been going steadily in a manner at the workouts during the past week have convinced the daily observers that the boat will be at its best against the Annapolis crafts. Harvard has an added incentive to win. The Crimson is out to repay the defeat Technology handed a week ago. It will force the engineers to the limit in order to win its last race. The Crimson supporters will determine the chances of a Yale victory on the showing of their favorites anains.

The mystery crew, Cornell, has been hindered in its progress this Spring by the late Winter blasts. The Red and Blue crew finishes far behind Harvard, Technology and Pennsylvania last Spring and it is unlikely that Pop Lauder has developed a winning crew in the short space of a year.

Observers at the Weld boat house during the past few days have agreed away with the impression, has a more perfect set of athletes, physically, that Cornell boats were not to be found. The strength of the crew in a race is problematical however, and the boat will start as a comparatively unknown tomorrow.

Jackie Aronson from Brooklyn is again the coxswain of the Red and Blue scull. Aronson for a second a skiff at Brooklyn High and last year was chosen as the varsity coxswain at Ithaca. He is capable of getting a boat experienced. This let he gets the cooperation of his mates.

FIGHTS I CAN'T FORGET by TAD — America's Greatest Boxing Authority

Ritchie Pasted Cross

A CHAMPIONSHIP fight of the old school was staged in Madison Square Garden on the night of November 10, 1913, for the entertainment of fifteen thousand silk hatted and sweater-clad New Yorkers.

It was ten rounds of the old-time blood and blows and delirium. And at the finish Willie Ritchie, the lightweight champion, was a battered but rolled winner over Leach Cross, the idol of the East Side.

It was one of the bloodiest ring battles in recent years, and the throng sat jammed the [illegible] cheered and screamed and yelled from the first [illegible] the [illegible] Round after round the two perfectly trained [illegible] battled and bruised, sprang at each other in a dizzying uproar [illegible] and [illegible] hearns calls of encouragement.

TWICE Cross was down under the fearful assault. Once the champion staggered from a terrific blow on the jaw. But a minute later they were dragged [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] as before.

For a minute in the third round, before hardly a drop of blood was spilled, it looked like the end. Cross had been fighting with desperate energy from the first opening of the battle. For him the victory meant the championship and $100,000.

When he darted out at the opening of the third the champion met [illegible] half way for the first time. He pumped his left fist into [illegible] face [illegible] a dozen times in quick succession, and Cross [illegible] down [illegible] He stepped forward once more, drawing back his left arm [illegible] a sweeping blow.

Ritchie slipped in like a shadow and drove his right fist with killing force against the exposed chin Cross' head dropped, his knees sagged, and he raised his hands to guard his jaw. But before they were high enough Ritchie had drawn back his right and had driven it full against the jaw a second before Cross covered, and Cross shoulders drooped, his arms fell limp, and he went down like a drink of water, while fifteen thousand men leaned to their feet with a yell that made the steel girders of the Garden quiver.

With the referee's arm pumping up and down over him he got to one knee. His face was a pasty white, and he rolled his glazed eyes toward his corner as if looking for aid. At eight he arose to a crouched position, crossed his forearms over his face, and faced the storm. Ritchie was upon him like a panther, lashing out with both hands. A right-hand blow on the temple just above the eye knocked the dazed man clear across the ring, and he sank to the floor by the ropes in the champion's corner, while the white-shirted men in the ringside boxes hammered with their canes on the wooden railings and screamed for a "knockout."

But again the East Sider was on his feet two seconds inside of the limit, and again the champion began hammering his head. But he could not land another solid blow, and just before the bell rang Cross landed out with a left swing that was badly aimed or it might have completely turned the battle.

But Cross was not a passive victim. He fought back savagely whenever he could worm through Ritchie's flying fists and get the range. A wicked smash with the right fist flush on the champion's mouth sent his lips and started them bleeding. And in the sixth and seventh rounds it looked for a time as if the East Sider might pull out a victory, and the galleries went mad with joy.

A HIGH overhand swing with the left caught the champion on the cheek-bone, and in a few minutes the whole right side of his face was an evil purple lump.

And again in the eighth round there was a moment when the East Side yell rose above the tumult. Ritchie sprang out of his corner at the bell and rushed across the ring to take his enemy by surprise. Cross met him with a left hook that landed full on the chin.

The last two rounds were all one story. Ritchie skipped about his man and drove in his fists accurately and swiftly, again and again. Gaunt and sullen and semi-eyed, with the dark bruises on his cheeks and the blood dripping from his thick lips, Cross turned sorrowfully his heavy feet like a beast with a death wound, fighting to the last and hoping for a slip or blunder that would open the way for a final leap at his opponent's throat. But the chance never came.

LATZO'S RIVALS TO CLASH IN SERIES OF BATTLES

New York, May 28 (A.P.)—Pete Latzo, if he sits at the ringside in Coney Island Stadium tonight, should recognize a future foe. He will see six candidates for welterweight honors mingling in three ten-round contests.

Featuring show is the meeting between Willie Harmon of New York and Joe Dundee of Baltimore, originally arranged to decide a challenger for the title then held by Mickey Walker. The winner may be the next opponent of the new champion, Latzo.

Then comes the veteran overgrown lightweight, Lew Tender of Philadelphia. Lew faces Basil Callinas of New Orleans. Tommy Freeman, the 147 pounds from Cleveland, will come to grips with Paul Doyle of New York.

Mullins to Force Wills Showdown

New York, May 28 (A.P.)—Paddy Mullins, manager of Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, now wields a little club of his own in the boxing arena. For years Paddy and Harry chased the two Jacks, Kearns and Dempsey, for a championship match without success. Kearns ruled the champion's maneuvers and kept him away from Wills.

Now Kearns is the seeker and Mullins the ruler, for it was Kearns, welterweight title holder, Mickey Walker, that Paddys mine boy, Pete Latzo, beat at Scranton, Pa., last week. Kearns desires a return match and Mickey has challenged.

And Paddy, unwillingly, suggests that Kearns still may be able to do something about a matter that has been hanging fire for some years—the Dempsey-Wills proposition.

Meet to Elect Eastern Leader

Springfield, May 28 (A.P.)—Election of a new president of the Eastern Baseball League to succeed the late Dan O'Neil of Holyoke will be considered in a meeting of the league club owners in Pittsfield this afternoon. While the choice of a successor to Mr. O'Neil cannot be predicted with any degree of certainty two names stand out prominently in league circles in this vicinity. They are William E. Carey of this city and Attorney Herman Weisman of Waterbury, Ct.

Both are former club owners. Carey bought the Springfield club in 1908 and held it until it was taken over by Arthur J. Shean, three or four years ago. He is considered a practical baseball man. Attorney Weisman was owner of the Waterbury club for two years preceding this year. In addition to these two it is expected that other names will figure in the election today.

HUB FANS PAY TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF 'MATTY' TODAY

ELABORATE PROGRAM AT WIGWAM

Mrs. Mathewson to Unveil Tablet; Old-Timers vs. Braves

By NICK FLATLEY

BOSTON pays its lasting physical tribute to the memory of Christy Mathewson at Braves Field today. A bronze tablet, fittingly inscribed, will be unveiled by Mrs Mathewson and Commissioner Landis high chief of baseball. Baseball followers and lovers of sport from all parts of the land will assist in this enduring testimonial to the greatest pitcher and one of the finest gentlemen the game has known.

It will be a big day for Boston and baseball at the Wigwam, if the weather permits. There will be two ball games, the ceremonials and an elaborate military display by the American Legion which is back of the movement to build the Stadium Memorial at Saranac Lake.

A team of old timers all of whom played or were in baseball when Matty was at the peak of his splendid career, will stage a five inning ball game with the Braves. Joe McGinnity and Roger Bresnahan, battery mates of Big Six in old days of Giant glory, will represent the Veterans.

Dick Rudolph of the Braves and Fred Mitchell of the Tribe also, will be the opposing battery, with Jack Meyers pairing on a more or third base. McGraw was Mathewson's greatest friend in baseball from the day that Christy came up from the New Tiger and League until the Great Umpire called him.

THE gates of the ball park will be opened at noon, and the old boys will have their ball game at 1:15. Commissioner Landis and President Heydler will act as umpires. If rocky trails from Buffalo gets in early enough. The pair left Pittsburgh last night, after handing in the Pirate pennant raising there.

The dedication and unveiling will take place at 2:45, preceded by a military parade of American Legion members, and special squads from the Army and Navy. The regular games between the Giants and the Braves will start promptly at three o'clock.

No more attractive program could be arranged for a single afternoon, and the fans will have the double pleasure of paying respect to the memory of one of the greatest and at the same time exciting plays of baseball and excitement.

Ball games between the Braves and Giants have always been for big affairs for the last few years and the Memorial team, home from the cruel trails, may snap to life against the New Yorkers who have started a winning streak, after a spectacular slump.

THE Braves play the Giants a double header tomorrow and then go to Brooklyn for a brief series before coming home to entertain the West. Manager Bancroft is more or less wrapped in the blues. His team he claims is just as good as it looked in the Spring, but his pitchers have been a bit worse than terrible.

The club has been hitting that ball and according to Bancy, has all its fight and pride. But gives a reply have been thrown off by poor pitching. More than a few of the athletes believe that an unscrupulous frosty Boston wrecked the arms.

Pitching was supposed to be the greatest Brave asset and the club had four or five knuckers who could have been sold for something like a million dollars in the Spring.

Zivic Is 10 to 9 Choice For Mello Bout

By JACK CONWAY

JACK ZIVIC, Pittsburh welterweight, has been installed a 10 to 9 favorite over Al Mello, New England welterweight champion, for their ten-round bout, which will be staged by the Suffolk A. A. at Braves Field on next Tuesday night.

Zivic's success in important bouts, particularly against so-called, is what has caused the speculative element to establish him as a betting choice.

The outstanding feat in Zivic's record is a five-round knockout of Lew Tendler at Pittsburgh. Keen ring judges argue that any fighter who socks hard enough to stop a headliner like Tendler should also be able to conquer Mello. Zivic has also beaten Tommy Milligan, European welterweight champion. While [illegible]

Joe Jacobs wants Sharkey for a contest with King Solomon at the Coney Island Stadium, while Leon Zeltzer of the Queensboro Club is anxious to book the local heavyweight into [illegible] June.

Meanwhile Sharkey is training for his tussle with Chuck Wiggins at Braves Field on June 22. He will journey to New York following the Weinert match.

Jimmy is not particular whom his opponent is, which should make the task of booking him easier than it otherwise would be. Before the shows at Revere, Stribling will tackle Paul Berlenbach at the Yankee Stadium on June 16 in a tussle for the world's light-heavyweight championship. It would not be surprising if Stribling won over Berlenbach.

Jones	5	4	5	3	4	5

Jamieson, a member of the championship golf squad last week, thought he put the fifteen foot struggle. Sweetser came from behind to win. Although consistent, outdriven, the Scotchman he was putting poorly and won on a one foot in the first nine. He took two putts to get six after a fine [illegible] shot to the green and on eleven, which stopped a few feet from the cup. Scott missed a short putt.

Sweetser lost the first in hollow style, being once in the rough and loser in the bunker. He was bunkered again on his approach to the third, and failed to hole a six-yard putt, while Scott had his approach [illegible]

Scott took the seventh and the American missed again a short putt. Both had bad approaches at the eighth, being caught over the green and they halved in fives. Sweetser snapped his fingers impatiently when he saw that his long straight iron shot was going over the green. The cards for the first nine holes:

PROUT READY FOR HOFF'S ATTACK

(By A.P.) The sporting world today awaited with interest the next move in the controversy between Eugene Hoff, barrel Norwegian pole vaulter, and officials of the Amateur Athletic Union.

William C. Prout, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the A. A. U., was expected to amplify his statement of last night in which he declared the organization would welcome Hoff, but that if he actually refuses further permits to participate in American meets.

In answer to the declaration of Hoff from Pendleton, Ore., that he would follow the example of [illegible] Norwegian, Sonnenfeld, and seek to run under the A. A. U. Prout said:

"If Mr. Hoff wants to [illegible] we will be very happy to give him [illegible] opportunity.

"At the same time it was noted that either Hoff would be allowed to [illegible] record evidence against the track star.

In announcing the ban the various amateur organizations declared that action had been predicated on [illegible] as hard although it had been impossible to obtain [illegible] information regarding some of the Norwegian's activities."

The ban was described as subsequent to suspension on charges relating to exorbitant expense money, activities in connection with motion picture rights to his performances and refusal to keep engagements on [illegible] of condition.

Hoff denied he has been under [illegible] at all.

The A. A. U. action started when it committed the big cruise of refusing to start at the A. A. U. meet in San Francisco so that the A. A. U. gate receipts were badly [illegible] depended.

He appealed the action of the San Francisco and announced his intention of taking the case to [illegible]

TOM ECK, NOTED TRAINER FOR 50 YEARS, DYING

Chicago, May 28 (A.P.)—Tom Eck, seventy-six, pioneer trainer of athletes for nearly fifty years, is critically ill in the county hospital today. He has been connected with the University of Chicago since 1916 handling distance runners.

Among runners and fields developed by Eck are Ted Meredith, who won [illegible] years ago; Jimmy Lee, who won [illegible] track athletes.

I. C. A. A. A. QUALIFICATIONS ARE HELD AT STADIUM

ATHLETES COME FROM 32 COLLEGES

U. S. C., Stanford and Harvard Stand Best Chance to Win the Title

By STED CHANDLER.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America, gathers for its fiftieth annual track championship meet; a half century of competition will be rounded out in Harvard Stadium, and the fiftieth meet. Even this predate viewpoint, shapes up as the best.

Today will see the qualifying heats, tomorrow the finals. But today's events are unusually important and the competition will be as thrilling as any that has been seen this year, for in a field that contains 358 names of athletes from thirty-two different institutions, any number of things are likely to happen which may have a decided effect upon the outcome of the meet.

Three teams stand out as serious contenders for the title honors, the University of Southern California, coached by Dean Cromwell; Stanford, coached by Robert L. "Dink" Templeton, and Eddie Farrell's Harvard outfit.

Owen Christie's University of California team and the Yale aggregation tutored by George Connor are also to be considered dangerous, and it will be impossible to accurately forecast anything until after the qualifications have sifted the field.

U. S. C. depends largely upon a group of sterling hurdlers, Stanford on its field power and Harvard upon its superb strength in the flat races. The latter's chances of the team honors, however, do not appear to be as good as the coast teams because of the fact that Farrell intends to give his stars the opportunity to gain what individual honors they can.

Unless there is a last moment change in pan, there will be no doubling up of the Crimson runners; Kane, Watters, Harrerty and Captain Thibeau will be allowed to run their own races.

The potential ability of these men, plus the speed of Al Miller in the sprints, however, make Harvard dangerous. A half dozen first places will count heavily in the scoring column, and in individual titles will add luster to the 1926 team, whose record this year has been sullied by but a third of a point.

Southern California is the home of the burdler. Leighton Dye, Reynolds, Stever, Grumbles, Leistner and Kerr will carry its colors over the sticks, and heading this group will be a task to test the Easterners to the utmost. U. S. C. has also Bud Houser, champion discus thrower and shot putter, who is generally conceded these two events, and Lee Barnes, who should easily capture the pole vault.

Stanford is strong in all the field events and has in addition the best half miler on the coast," Bill Richardson.

Sabin Carr will come the closest to Lee Barnes, the Olympic pole vault champion of U. S. C., and Ellsworth Davies are hoping that he will unloose an inspired vault. It is a possibility.

Competition will be the stiffest in the dashes, the half, and the mile, and will be weaker than usual in the hammer and broad jump. The record most likely to fall is that in the two miles, while none except the 440 and mile are considered to be entirely safe from the assault.

In order to win the meet at least 50 points will be necessary, and the winner will probably accumulate in the neighborhood of 85.

After today's results are known, it will be possible to draw much more accurate conclusions.

The large field enhances the possibility of the elimination of some of the favorites. The brush at the mark may be a crushing blow to somebody's championship hopes. That is why these qualifications carry so much importance. Both days of this meet are going to be hummers.

Coaches Express Views on Prospects

WALTER CHRISTIE (University of California)—We fear Harvard, as we feel that the Eastern teams are better in open competition than in dual meets. We also naturally fear U. S. C. and Stanford, but we do not underestimate the East.

EDDIE FARRELL (Harvard)—Harvard is out to win if possible, of course. But my men have done so much for me that I am going to let them do something for themselves. The competition put up by the Coast teams will be stiff.

ROBERT L. TEMPLETON (Stanford)—Stanford doesn't fear anybody. We are not concerned with the performances of the other teams, but with the work of our own boys.

JACK MOAKLEY (Cornell)—I think that Harvard has a good chance to win the meet. The West, of course, is strong, but I rather feel that the Crimson can come through.

OSCAR HEDLUND (M. I. T.)—I think that U. S. C. is the team to be feared, with Stanford next, and Harvard a possibility.

LAWSON ROBERTSON (Pennsylvania)—Penn hasn't much of a team here this time, but even then, we might beat those Westerners out of some points.

TOM KEANE (Syracuse)—We don't expect to win, naturally, with a small team to cope with such opposition as will be furnished by Harvard, Yale and the Coast outfits, but we do expect a great deal from Loucks in the two-mile.

VETERAN TRACK STARS HOLD BANQUET

The old-timers as well as the present-day stars of the track world will fashion gala occasions of today and tomorrow.

In conjunction with the 50th anniversary of the I. C. A. A., the "ancient and honorable," those men who participated in intercollegiate meets in years goen by, will hold a reunion and field day.

This is the first event of its kind and promises to establish a precedent and set the foundations of a tradition. Tonight there will be a banquet at the Algonquin Club, one of the purposes of which is to form a "Old-Timers' Association" which will number among its activities an annual dinner in connection with the future I. C. 4 A meets.

Tomorrow afternoon between the hours of two and three, many of these old stars will "do their stuff" in the Stadium. Dr. G. M. Hammond, winner of the 440 and 880 in 1877, the year of the second intercollegiate meet, will wear the colors of Columbia in the 440.

Other feature events will be a tug of war, high bicycle race, and the one and two-mile walks, which are now extinct in the world of college competition.

Among those who will be present at the dinner tonight are C. Crelton Webb, of Yale, first president of the I. C. A. A. A.; Judge H. C. Stimson of Denver, Albert Thorndike, William H. Pace, Prof Samuel Williston, Prof George B. Morgan, Maxey Long, H. H. Sayre, J. R. Kilpatrick, F. G. Beck, Dr. Randolph Faires, George L. Patterson, Ralph Gamble, W. J. Holland, and Dr. Fred M. Bonine.

De Paolo's Record Broken in Trials

Indianapolis, May 28 (A.P.)—With choice positions in the starting array of the Memorial Day 500-mile automobile race already allotted, twenty-six other drivers today were ready to take the track in their attempts to land places among the thirty-three cars which will start the race.

Frank Lockhart, sensational young Pacific Coast driver, brought spectators to their feet yesterday with two laps which broke the track record formerly held by Pete De Paolo.

Other drivers who qualified were David Lewis, Phil Shafler, Jules Ellinghoe, Bennett Hill, Frank Elliott, Robert McDougall, Dr. E. W. Shattuck, W. Cliff Durant, Anthony Pulotta and Fred Comer.

Herbert Jones, a relatively inexperienced driver, hovered near death in a local hospital today as a result of injuries received when his car scraped the retaining wall at the north turn while it was travelling at the rate of 108 miles an hour yesterday.

JOE MALGEWICZ TOSSES GRENNA AND YUSKO

By JACK CONWAY

Joe Malcewicz tossed both Raffael Grenna, Italian heavyweight champion, and Frank Yusko, Lithuanian title holder, as his part of the contribution to the wrestling show at the Arena.

Grenna was billed as Malcewicz' opponent. The Italian looked weak and in poor condition when he entered the ring. He also had a big gash under his left eye while his face was bruised.

Raffael didn't offer any resistance to Malcewicz and his shoulders were pinned to the canvas in four minutes, a top scissors and double wrist lock doing the execution.

Grenna declared he was unable to resume wrestling and he made a speech in Italian in which he stated he injured his head and spine as a result of a fall down a flight of stairs in the hotel where he is stopping.

Yusko was then secured to wrestle Malcewicz. Despite the fact he has not been in training, Yusko gave a fine account of himself. He had the brilliant Malcewicz in distress on several occasions. Joe finally injured one of Yusko's arms with an arm lock and scored the winning fall in 33m. 30s. with a double wrist lock.

The real thrill of the show was furnished in the semi-final when Howard Cantowine, sensational Iowa Thunderbolt, tossed Ned McGinn, Irish heavyweight, in 38m. with a reverse flying wing lock.

Stanley Stasiak, Lion of Poland won over Bernie Andrews of Utica in 27m. 30s with a couple arm lock and back fall.

In the opening bout, Jack McPherson, Scottish champion, wrestled a 30m. draw with Leone Labriola, Italian heavyweight.

Needham High's baseball club will play four games next week. On Monday afternoon Walmsley makes its inaugural bow at Memorial Park, Dedham follows suit on the following day. Milton and Concord are the nail two opponents on Friday and Saturday.

In 1924 the Green Cubs won 15-2 while last year's score was 10-1. Both games might be called top-sided affairs. Meanwhile Jim Hester who has been chosen by Coach Mann to lead the visitors is ready to check their winning habit in New Hampshire.

This stunt is something that no other [redacted] in this vicinity would attempt, but Needham is not worrying neither are the ball players having restless nights. Capt. Everett Wiseley, center-fielder, is the entire varsity member who will be lost by graduation.

Coach March who directs the doings of the Tyngsboro ball team in Exeter New Hampshire hopes to widen the two record breakings handed his nine by Dartmouth Freshmen during the past two years when these aggregations meet again this week-end.

HOW TO MAKE A BUDGET OF TIME

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

BUDGET TALK NO. 63

By MARTHA LEE

IT is almost impossible to place a money value upon the time which the mother in the home gives in service for her family. Because it has a money value and a high one at that, the time devoted to planning, sewing and general house work should be carefully budgeted

In making a TIME BUDGET, be sure to see that the less important things for the essentials. Try to plan your time so that just as much as possible can go accomodial, leaving undone only the unessentials that can afford to wait.

Divide your time so as to allow for work, rest and play. Authorities tell me that a third of each 24 hours should be devoted to these three subjects. Lack of play time makes work seem a drudgery and too little rest is bound to result in forced work of poor quality

In planning the time budget in the home where there are children a certain part of the latter how small—of the work and care of the house should be given to each child This gives them a sense of citizenship in the home, while it helps make them better citizens in the community.

First, list the essential things that must be done, with the time each one will take. Then, arrange the work in the order you prefer. Allow time enough for the average interruptions, but not enough to permit dawdling. If by chance, you are not interrupted, you will have gained some extra time which you can use for less important work in it asts for just these moments of unexpected leisure.

Try to plan a definite time for rest and play and stick to your time budget. If, of course, as will often happen, some worthwhile playinterruption comes in the working period, don't pass it up but make the time up later out of the playtime Student. Your daily time budget should contain a list of routine work in the order in which it is to be done.

For instance, in the morning putting the living-room in order; preparing and serving breakfast kitchen and bed-room work; special work of the day, such as cleaning or extra baking; preparing lunch eon, straightening the dining-room and kitchen and dish-washing; a rest period, sewing, marketing; out door exercises or other recreation; preparing and serving dinner; straightening the dining room and doing dishes. Besides the daily budget a short weekly program of special work might be made up. For instance Monday: Attending to laundry and straightening up the house in general. Tuesday: Washing and ironing clothing not sent to the laundry Wednesday: Cleaning bed-rooms and bath. Thursday: Cleaning silver and brass and straightening up pantry Friday Cleaning living-room and hall and weekly mending. Saturday Preparing Sunday meals as far as possible putting away clean cloth ing, special dusting preparatory for Sunday.

Necessary routine work, rest and social life.

If you do not know how to make the most of every hour in the 24 won't you write me full particulars of your household plans and duties, and let me help you? And at the same time, do send for your Budget Form if you have not one already.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Q. M. C. asks for further help with her budget. Husband's salary varies from $75 to $90 weekly, and he pays $30 monthly compensation in addition to the dining-room and kitchen and dish-washing; a rest period, sewing, marketing; out door exer-

$1.38; gas, $1.50; laundry, $1.10; paper, $5; cream, milk, $1.10; husband's carefares to work, $4.50, and garage, $1.25.

It is harder to budget a variable income than a definite salary. However, the safest way is to budget the smallest amount ever received each week and use the extra money when it is most needed as it comes in. Since you are sure of $32 a week regular compensation, we would budget that thus: Savings, $4 including insurance of $1.25, shelter, $12, including rent and husband's fares to work; food, including milk and husband's lunches, $2.50 (I am assuming there are two in family); clothing, $3.50; operating, including gas which is high, laundry and heat, $6; personal, $3, out of which must come the garage rent and expenses of the automobile, your own spending money, amusements, doctors' and dentists' bills and all life luxuries

You will probably need to apply some of your extra income to your food budget, and also to personal, but this will come easily out of the extra $28 a week that you often receive I would try to stick to this lower budget and add most of the extra money to my savings account.

Mrs. H. E. F. asks for a $20 budget. Rent, $26 a month; gas, $2.50; insurance, $6 cents weekly and $13.65 every three months; balance for food and clothes

Has four children husband and self in family. Has a chance to buy a home which would cost about $40 a month Wants to know how to figure it out—knows it will be hard for a while, but believes that by sticking right to budget, will manage to meet expenses.

Dear Lady, I certainly do sympathize with your desire to own your own home. Let's see how it can be done. A $20 budget will give you a $2 for savings $6 for shelter including your husband's business carfares; $9 for food; $6 for clothing; $1 for operating and $2 for personal.

At present, you are using your entire savings allotment in insurance which amounts to $1.95 weekly $4 for shelter should also include your husband's business carfares, but at present you are paying the entire $6 for rent. $9 for food should include your husband's lunches, and with four in a family I know this means careful figuring. Maybe you will have to borrow a little from your operating. Budget will allow you $6 for clothing; if you are going to invest in a home, which will give you $9.25 week's for shelter without your husband's carfares. You will have to borrow from this clothing allotment for the present to make up the difference. budget allows you $5 for operating, heat light and gas, and I am sure you can save something here; out of $3 personal comes the doctor's and dentist's bills, all little luxuries, movies, church dues, newspapers and magazines. By making a careful study of economy, shopping on clothing and watching your operating costs. I am sure you can meet the payments on the new home.

Please know that I will consider it a privilege to help you with your budget Adress full particulars to Home Budget Editor, Boston American.

"The Temptress" -:- By Ibanez

Moreno made clear to her that his claim to the guardianship of Pico-nario fortune was well substantiated by the papers the Italian had left. The fortune of which he would have charge was ample. By great good luck—for them—it happened that the doctor had, before the duel, entrusted all the cash he had on hand to his second. The made it possible for Moreno to pay the expenses of the trip

"Go-e to Buenos Aires," said Moreno. "I shall assemble all the de posits Pirovano had there, and I'll also try to collect what the government owes him for the work here in La Tresa. I know a lot of influential people who'll help me get that money. Just as soon as matters are settled, we'll start for Europe."

"Paris!" mused Moreno. "How I want to be there with you . . . Elena. For you will allow me to call you Elena, won't you?"

First came shots; then there passed before Watson a vyes several riders, some of them advancing at a gallop, while others, halting, fired at the mountaineers, who surrendered

Watson mounted his horse and started off at full gallop in the direction taken by Rojas.

The rancher had already been in close pursuit of Manos Duras for several minutes, and he had not given up hope of overtaking him. The animal Manos Duras rode had two burdens to carry; and all the while he was spurring on his horse the bandit had to keep tight hold of the still unsubdued Celinda. Rojas had the advantage of two free hands as he gave chase

The gaucho turned around several times, taking aim with the revolver he held in his left hand. Two bullets whistled past Don Carlos. He replied with two bullets. then stopped. He had just discovered that he had only three more cartridges. Besides, shooting was dangerous. He might wound Celinda.

The gaucho, better supplied with shot, went on firing. He shot down the rancher's hor e

The rancher stood by helpless, while the bandit sped away, holding Celinda down on the saddle tree. Then he concentrated all his will on the hand that held his revolver. He must kill the bandit's horse.

He was, as a rule, a sure shot But he fired without effect; and again he fired. The gaucho still sped on, and Don Carlos raised his revolver for the last shot. Suddenly Manos Duras' horse staggered, slowed down and plunged to the ground, raising a cloud of dust in a last frenzied kick.

Rojas ran forward; but before he reached the struggling group Manos Duras had already extricated himself from the saddle, and, still hold ing Celinda, stood waiting for him, his second revolver drawn.

Don Carlos went a few steps further; but the shot that rang out passed so near his cheek that for a moment he thought it must have caught him. He dropped to the ground in order to offer the marksman a smaller target, and dragged himself along, keeping his revolver in his left hand. The gaucho, unaware that his enemy had but one shot left, thought it was Don Carlos' intention to draw nearer so as to make sure of the effect of his bullets, and he went on firing, holding Celinda in front of him as the while as a shield against her father's shots. But the girl's struggles to free herself from the grip of that sinewy arm shook his hand and spoiled the bandit's aim.

"If you try one more shot, old man, I kill your daughter!"

This warning, added to the knowledge that he had but one more bullet in his cartridge chamber, forced Don Carlos to content himself with slowly crawling forward over the sand, seeking the shelter of the hummocks on its surface

But meanwhile Manos Duras became instinctively aware of the presence of a new danger. He looked about attempting to discover it.

The invisible enemy was Watson, who, when he heard shots, dismounted, and under cover of the rough desert brush, advanced Indian-fashion towards the scene of the revolver duel

For a moment he felt tempted to fire from the back at Manos Duras; but there was danger of his wounding Celinda, whose movements could not be counted on. So he returned to his horse and detached from the saddle the lasso that the Senorita de Rojas had given him. Holding it in his right hand, he circled about through the bush until he was directly behind the bandit.

Mrs. Beeckman on Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am going to a dinner dance at a large hotel. Dinner is at 7:30. Would it be proper if I wear my hat to dinner or should I go without it? I will have to wear one, as we have to go by train. MRS. H. M.

SINCE, for a dinner dance, you will wear evening clothes, you should not wear your hat to the table. Check it in the coatroom, which will be provided.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I have gone about with a boy for four years. His sister is going to be married soon and she has asked her cousin to be her attendant and my boy friend to be the best man.

Is this correct? Shouldn't she ask me instead of the cousin? Is it right for her to leave me out, as we are good friends? L. G.

SHE did exactly the correct thing.

A bride asks her sister to be her maid of honor or matron of honor, and, if she has no sister, she asks a cousin or a very close friend. But if she is very fond of the cousin, that relationship would count before a friend, if she chooses to have it.

The bride chooses her attendants herself and the groom chooses his best man. It is no one but the groom to even suggest whom they should choose. The fact that you are a friend of the bride's brother has nothing to do with the choice—indeed, it would make no difference if you were married to her brother. Let the bride choose whom she wishes.

The Making of a Husband, By Ann Lisle

By Ann Lisle

"Why are you so pink and rosy and gay, Arlette?" he asked of his little model. "Is it because you rejoice to have me call on you—or because you were having such a pleasant time with Mr. Harrison when I batted in?"

"I have work," Arlette replied sedately. "I have put on the kitchen stove to order again. I am warm while the bloods run so fast now."

"Cryptic and unsatisfactory," said Mr. Perry, deliberately talking over Arlette's head, and smiling at me in a way that managed to exclude Jim as well. "However we won't bother about you just now. It is to Mr. Harrison I want to talk."

Arlette a color drained away and she went pale at the insulting way in which she was made to feel her position. But she went over to the window and sank into a low chair, where she sat as still and silent as the shy wood creatures she so often resembled.

"Draw up a chair, Harrison," commanded Nicholas Perry in the tone of authority which seems to be growing on him as he finds ways in which to compensate for his helpless hands and the handicap they give him. "I've a proposition to make you."

"Let's hear it." Jim said easily, as he made a place for himself at my side, and threw a casually possessive arm around me.

"Why don't you run a car?" demanded our visitor.

"Obvious! Can't afford it," Jim clipped out tersely.

"And I can't afford to be without one," Nicholas Perry replied.

"It would help you a bit to have a car to get around in," Jim said. "Having your hands bandaged doesn't seem like such a business until you stop to remember how convenient they are for getting hold of things."

"Right!" said Nicholas Perry cheerfully. "It I can't afford an expensive chauffeur and all the incidentals he would entail. All I can afford is to buy a car and contribute about fifty a month toward its upkeep."

"Gas isn't THAT high!" laughed Jim.

"No, but tires are known to go wrong when brought into contact with glass or nails. And carburetors and engines and a lot of other things I don't even know by name, need adjustment. And chauffeurs know how to make all that cost. And a man with no hands to use can't show his driver how to make a simple repair with a screwdriver and save at least hours of work and fifty dollars' worth of bill at the repair shop."

"You're pretty near right," Jim laughed agreeableively. "The fellow who keeps my car in order saves a dollar or so now and then. But, of course, you can't do that just now. It's a shame, just when a car would probably speed you along the road to recovery a mile a minute

"Couldn't we work out a neighborly proposition?" suggested Mr Perry. "I was just talking things over with your wife. You both know—and love 'em. I take it If I bought a car and contributed fifty a month to its upkeep, and you ran it—guaranteeing me a couple of hours' ride every day and one day a week for touring, it would be a blessing to me—and no hard ship to you. How about it?"

I felt Jim's arm tighten about my neck. I could imagine how impassive a poker face he was wearing as he replied:

"That's a bit far fetched, Perry We aren't in the garage business."

"I want a car. You want a car For various reasons neither of us can afford it." Nicholas Perry said imperturbably. "It together we could. Why not?"

"How about it, Anne?" Jim asked "Of course we'd pay for the upkeep. Do you want to consider this seriously?

"In so far as I like. I'm not interested," I said.

OUR OLD FRIEND GELATINE

DOES gelatine to you mean just an easy-to-make dessert for a hot day, or does it mean a real food, valuable for every member of the family and almost an indispensable staple on your pantry shelves as salt or sugar?

Gelatine with its protein and albumen content is gradually coming into its own.

The following are just a few of the many uses of gelatine:

Transforming consomme or bouillon into attractive jellied soups, in mayonnaise, meat sauces and gravies, in marshmallow pudding sauces. In frostings and fillings for cakes in pie, tart and cream puff fillings, in unbaked meringues, for stiffening whipped cream for as a whipped cream substitute, by adding beaten gelatine to whipped evaporated milk In making quick for summertime use with fruit as an In croquettes gelatine makes this form of cookery easier to shape and when the heat of frying dissolves the gelatine again, it makes the insides of the croquettes soft and creamyl, in marmalades and jams. Also to stiffen fruit jellies which have refused to harden. A delicious hot weather salad is—

JULIENNE SALAD.

2 tablespoonfuls gelatine.
½ cup cold water
1 pint boiling water.
¼ cup sugar.
1 lemon (juice)
1 apple.
1 tomato.
1 stalk celery
½ green pepper.

Make a plain lemon jelly. Peel tomato and apple and cut into long thin strips, cut celery and pepper like wise. Arrange in alternate layers in a mold fill the mold with jelly as it hardens into a semi solid layer on top of layers and allowing layer to harden before putting on another. Serve with lettuce mayonnaise.

CREAM CHICKEN SALAD.

½ cup cold chicken stock.
¾ cup hot chicken stock, highly seasoned.
1 cup cooked chicken, cut in dice.
1 cup heavy cream
Salt and pepper.

Soak gelatine in cold stock, dissolve in hot stock and strain. When mixing begins to thicken, beat, and add egg butter, until frothy; then add cream, beaten until stiff, and chicken dice. Season with salt and pepper. Turn into quarter pound baking pottles, first dipped in cold water, and chill. Chicken served in this way is more digestible than when it is served without the addition of gelatine. Serve on crisp lettuce with mayonnaise.

And last of all a company dessert large enough to serve 6 or 8 people

DELMONICO PUDDING.

2 almond macaroons.
½ small bottle of maraschino cherries
1½ teaspoons gelatine.
2 tablespoons cold water
2 cups milk.
1 cup sugar
3 egg yolks.
3 egg whites
Pinch of salt

Break macaroons in small pieces and pour over liquor from cherries. Add cherries cut in small pieces. Soak gelatine in cold water. Heat milk to scalding point in double boiler, add sugar. Beat yolks well and add some of hot milk to yolks, then pour slowly into hot milk. Cook over low fire 5 to 6 minutes. Add gelatine and cook 2 minutes longer Cook custard until it will coat a metal spoon. Remove from fire and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and pinch of salt. Pour custard over macaroons and cherries. Put in cold place to set, stirring several times so that macaroons are mixed well. Serve with whipped cream. This is better made the day before serving—it will keep several days if cold. Serves 8 or 9 persons.

Bye for today.

Absorbing Story of Life in Boston Today Is Revealed

CHAPTER XVII.

WHEN Charlotte came face to face with Gregory Thomas she tried to slip through the crowd and lose herself, but his keen eyes perceived her.

In two strides he was at her side. His hand closed on her arm.

"Charlotte!"

She looked up to see his eyes blazing into hers, devouring her.

"Where have you hidden yourself?" he demanded. "Why did you run away? I've combed the city for you—done everything but put a detective on your trail!"

"I went to Canada for awhile," she answered, concealing the fact of how brief a time it had been. "Now I'm working here in Boston."

"Working—you!" he exclaimed. "Charlotte, what are you doing?"

She hesitated a moment. "I'm on my way to work now," she answered a little defiantly. "I am selling cigarettes in a cabaret."

"What!" It was an explosion.

He drew her hand into the curve of his arm and started to walk slowly down Boylston street with her.

"We'll stop and talk over a cup of coffee," he said. "I want to hear all about this wild whim that led you to the cabaret."

"No, no," she protested. "It's good of you, but I haven't time. I shall be late now."

"I know," he said grimly. "Charlotte, did you need money so badly? Why, oh, my dearest one, didn't you tell me—"

She withdrew her hand from his arm with a pathetic dignity.

"You have been my friend—my only friend—and I regard you very highly. But I couldn't have accepted help—even from you. And you must let me go. It will be so much easier for me, if you don't accompany me."

"But I shan't have a moment's peace, if I have to spend the evening thinking of you, with your sweetness and radiance, in that cabaret," he protested.

"It isn't bad, at all—really," she assured him cheerfully. "And it bothers me and I have a very good friend, a dancer called Gypsy Adair, who looks after me like an older sister."

"I'll let you go on one condition," he warned her. "That is that you tell me where you live and let me come to see you sometimes."

She gave him the address and hurried away, though he tried to detain her longer.

She was thoroughly upset by his chance encounter. It was the last thing she wanted—to see him as much as she desired to see him and feel again the comfort of his presence and his all-encom, assing friendship, she knew that she would once more, have to begin her battle with herself. Once more, she must steel herself to relinquish the shelter, the protection and the [illegible] when he asked her to make him [illegible].

And she had endured much suffering since she had run away from him! This time she really found for her own strength, her ability to say "No" to him.

She Sees Leila

That night she vanded her wares on their heroine tray mechanically. She was dreading the morrow and the outcome of her interview with Gregory Thomas, measuring her strength to resist him.

Charlotte, leaning against a pillar in a quiet corner of the room, hardly clasped idly before her, became suddenly aware of a low murmur of conversation at the table nearest her.

The man was a familiar type, sleek, high-colored, too well dressed, with caressing eyes and cruel, predatory lips. His long, slim, overly manicured fingers, that reminded Charlotte unpleasantly of Lawrence Mills's, lay over the hand of the girl, stroked it as he talked, looking deep into her eyes.

Charlotte held her breath. The girl was her step-daughter, Leila Manning.

Leila Manning's face wore a silly, half-drunken smile. Her cheeks were flushed and her dull eyes turned to Charlotte without a trace of recognition.

Small wonder, for Charlotte was made up for her role.

Her paint stood out in splotches under her sudden pallor at the sight of Manning's daughter, her own step-daughter, in such company. She had little reason to love Leila—indeed, she had hardly learned to like her during the years when she had been Manning's wife—but all her love for her husband prompted her to watch the girl, so precious to him, from impending danger.

She edged closer to the table and offered her cigarette tray with an insinuating smile, but the man muttered her away impatiently. His entire attention was centered on his companion and Charlotte noticed that he kept Leila's glass well-filled from a flask, while he himself drank little.

Charlotte managed to keep close to the table and she heard Leila's companion say, as he stroked her hand and looked into her eyes:

"Well, it's dice we're starting, if we're going to get there while the fun's on. I tell you, G'e is a great place—you'll love it, dearie."

Charlotte's heart stood still. He was going to take Leila—that child—to a place where couples came and went—or stayed—and no questions asked!

Charlotte Spurned

Leila was murmuring something which Charlotte couldn't catch though she strained her ears.

"Oh, it'll be all right," the man reassured her. "You my sweet girl? Is out of town. Who'll be the wiser? You can tell your maid that you spent the night with a girl friend, if we get back too late for you to go home."

Leila looked a moment, took a long gulp from her glass and finished it, and in a voice raggedly sweet, said:

"It'll be lovely! Let's go!"

"That's the spirit! Good little girl—her companion responded heartily. "I'll go out and bring the car around and also fill this flask." He picked up his pocket flask. "You can join me at the entrance in about ten minutes."

He rose and went. Charlotte watched him as he left the room. The girl leaned up her wrists and started to rise, but her knees gave way and she sank back to her chair, helplessly, looking stupid and silly.

Charlotte approached her.

"Can I help you? Do you feel [illegible]?"

[illegible] dazed[illegible].

"I would like to go to the dressing room and lie down, please. I don't feel very—well."

Once in the dressing room, stretched on a couch with a pillow under her head and a towel dipped in ice water against her hot forehead, Leila revived amazingly.

"I'm better now," she declared, glancing at her wrist watch. "I must hurry to join my escort. He's probably wondering what's become of me. She pushed aside Charlotte's hand gently.

"Please." Charlotte was desperate. "Please, Leila, don't go. Don't go anywhere else tonight."

Leila looked up at her sharply. Her old protective instinct in self in her drink-dulled mind.

"Don't be impertinent. It is none of your business what I do."

"Yes it is." Charlotte said quietly. "I am a much older than you, and the place where you're planning to go tonight has a bad reputation. I would regret it ter[illegible]."

Leila stared at her curiously for a long moment, half in anger, half in curiosity. To Charlotte's dismay, she saw something dawn suddenly in Leila's eyes as the girl sprang from the couch.

"Now I know who you are!" Leila exclaimed. "You're Charlotte, You're my father's friend, how dare you!" she cried furiously. "How dare you scrub me, evan speak to me! You!"

Who Occupies a Unique Position in the Writing World as an Authority on Problems of Love

"KEEPING steady company" is an expression much used nowadays. Just after all, isn't the exact meaning of the phrase a little vague?

My correspondent was "keeping steady company," but as she expresses it, she was not "anywhere near" engaged. "Dear Miss Fairfax," she writes, "I've been going out with Eddie twice a week steadily for six months but we were never engaged. There was nothing more to each other than good friends.

"One day Walter came along, liked him then and there. And he certainly did like me. I waited until I was sure of him, and then, so much, to encourage Walter, and decided that my going about with Eddie was the reason Walter didn't come to see me or ask me to go out, so I tried to break away from Eddie little by little. In this I finally succeeded.

"When Walter heard I wasn't going about with Eddie any more he was like a different person. You could think I had committed a crime or done something terrible. He acted so indifferent—hardly ever spoke except to say 'Hello,' and smile. He's not at all like the [illegible] I knew.

"I am wondering whether the following facts explain his attitude: Walter owns a farm. On this farm Eddie was the reason Walter didn't carries on a gravel pit business, but never wanted anyone else on [illegible] the farm house on his place and thinks his gravel works is Eddie's mother said she would be glad to do this for him. So she moved there. I learned from a friend that Eddie has badly upset Walter, thinking he was the cause.

"Do you suppose Walter is acting the way he does because he doesn't want Eddie's mother to think he—Walter—is to blame? If she gets angry with him, this may inconvenience him in his business.

"I like Eddie, but I love Walter. And I'm sure he loves me.

"I wasn't engaged to Eddie or anywhere near it, so why should Walter be afraid? Maybe he thinks

ANSWER.

Your pe mon s one that often arises. Alice, when a girl drifts into keeping "steady company" with a man whom she doesn't love, to whom she isn't engaged.

The moment you begin going about exclusively with one man, that man is likely to feel a certain proprietary right though he may not assume the burden and responsibility of an engagement to wed. Such an arrangement is entirely one-sided, discriminating, in favor of the man in the case.

If Walter really loves you, he'll let you know sooner or later when he's convinced that you are not engaged to Eddie or Jeremy. If he loves you, he won't allow a matter of trifling business inconvenience to come between you and him.

"Keeping steady company" is a [illegible] proposition. If you are wise, you will avoid this understanding by refusing to limit your friendship and attentions to any one man until that man proves his right to monopolize your time and heart by asking you to be his wife and with[illegible] your love.

before. But he expressed no surprise.

"Plenty of them folks tell me," he said, "since I've heard of them in the Lodge, though."

"Oh," said Edith, slightly daunted, "are there lots of them?"

"Ten'm," he replied. "Annie Cochran, she had one here, used to hang around the shore—built off the gun room. And there used to be plenty outside. Fellows strolling trawl out in the bay used to see them over the swamp."

Mystery of Lights

"Marsh gas," I suggested.

"Maybe," he said, with his take-it or leave-it attitude, as we went into the house.

Then Edith and Thomas left me and I opened the shutters of the library and sat down at the desk. I could hear Edith insisting on seeing the shower-bath off the gun room. Then their voices died away, and I began to go through the desk once more. All important papers had been taken away after the death and the drawers contained the usual[illegible]ruff of such depositories, old letters, several check books, their wrote filled in Uncle Horace's neat hand.

Naturally, I was thinking of him. More or less, I was concentrated on him, if this is any comfort to my spiritualistic friends. He had, indeed, fallen out of the very chair in which I sat when he was stricken, and had apparently cut his head badly on the corner of the desk. All this was in my mind, as I closed the last drawer and surveyed the heap of rubbish on the desk.

I suppose I was subconsciously reconstructing the night of his death when he had penned that word "danger" which now is, clear, to our minds, a warning to be better. And that when I wandered into the den he was still thinking of it. But I cannot feel that my entrance into the room, or my idly switching on the reading which stood there, had the slightest connection with the message. I seemed at that moment to be very much of a pepper pot, and this was true in my case. I do not recall that there was any question in my mind, either, as to which bottom drawer on the right I was to remove. But I must record here a fact which the medium which my spiritualistic friends would add to the picture as proof positive of its other earth origin.

Edith came back. I could hear her in the library.

"I've found Annie Cochran's blue light," she called. "A piece of phosphorescent wood. No wonder this neighborhood's haunted." Then she came into the drawing with Thomas behind her, and suddenly stopped.

"Why! she said, "what funny shadows!"

"Shadows!"

Then she laughed and ran her fingers across her eyes.

"My error," she said. "When I came in I seemed to see a sort of cloud under the ceiling. It's gone now."

Old Thomas stood by, quietly.

Shadows Seen

"Lots of folks have seen them shadows, he said. "Some say they're red and some brown. I ain't ever seen them myself, so I can't say. I'm turned to go. Maybe it's phosphorescence" he said, and went away with a sort of creepy mirth shaking him.

Behind the drawer I found the letter.

(Note: I made no copy of the letter in the original. Journal, so I give it here.)

Unfinished letter of Mr. Horace Porter, addressee to me unknown, and dated the day of his death, June 27 of the preceding year.

"I am writing this in great distress of mind, and in what I feel is a righteous anger. It is incred ible to me that you cannot see the preposterous of the course you have proposed.

"In all earnestness I appeal to you to consider the enormity of the idea. Your failure to comprehend my own attitude to it, however, makes me believe that you may be open ed to go on with it. In that case I shall feel it my duty, not only to go to the police, but to warn society in general.

"I make fully the unpleasantness of my own situation; even, if you are consistent, its danger. But—

The letter had not been finished.

June 28

I slept very little last night, and this morning made an excuse to go up to town with the [illegible] Larkin had telephoned me that he had an inquiry on the house through Cranston, and this gave me a pretext.

Larkin is impressed with the letter, but does not necessarily see its connection with Uncle Horace's death.

"After all," he said, "you've got your medical man's statement that he died of heart failure. Suppose he was scared to death? That isn't a crime in law. And you've got to remember the old gentleman was pretty much of a pepper pot. He attacked me almost as violently as that once for my politics!"

"He didn't threaten you with the police, did he?"

"No; he recommended a sanitarium, I think. You haven't an idea who it's meant for, you say?"

"Not the slightest. He hadn't any friends, relatives, so far as I know. The Livingstones, very decent people with a big place about six miles from him his doctor, and myself—that's about all."

"Enormity of the idea," he read again. "Of course that might be a new poison gas, or this thing the press is always swarting up, the death ray. Some fellow with a bee in his bonnet, you may be sure.

"That wouldn't imply danger to himself."

"Any fellow with a bee in his bonnet is dangerous," he said, and gave me back the letter.

Maggie Is Afraid

"Of course," he went on, "you've made a few points about the fuss on the corner. If it's blood, it's hardly likely he got up again and put it where you found it. But I think you'll find the servant there, that's her name, picked it up in her excitement and threw it into the drawer. People don't always know what they do at such times. However, if you like, I'll have that straightened and see what it is."

I was off the corner, and left him putting it carefully into an envelope.

"What is the use of my bothering about sweeping off demons by drawing some sort of a cabalistic figure around yourself?" he asked. "You'd better let me in on it; I need a holiday now and then."

Which proves that a man may shoot the starred virtues and be unheard forever, but if he babble nonsense in a wilderness it will travel around the world.

Nevertheless, I am the better for the talk with him. I have been too closely consorting with my womankind, probably, the most virile man can become effeminized in time. And Larkin's attitude as to renting the house is an eminently sane one.

"Rent it with it saying anything," he said "and ten to one whoever takes it will have a peaceable summer. But do as you suggest, tell the tenant the place has the reputation of being haunted, and ghosts will be as thick as mosquitoes in August."

He has agreed for some photographs of the property, and I have promised them for the day after tomorrow.

"I have settled down into our routine here very comfortably. Our eggs and milk are brought early morning by a buxom farmer's daughter, one Maggie Morrison, a sturdy red-cheeked girl who drives in a small truck, and backs and turns before the Lodge rather than circle around the main house.

"Surely," I said to her yesterday, "you aren't afraid of the place in daylight?"

"Not afraid," she said "but it gives me the shivers."

So clear was the water this afternoon that, rowing to the old sloop, I could see the barnacles encrusting it, and the long strings of kelp which Long from it like green and matted hair. Edith, bare-armed and slim in white flannels, paddled around it appraisingly.

"Needs a shave and a hair cut," she decided.

The boathouse is ready for your Holiday. She has put in it a great many of love and one or two of my most treasured personal possessions.

"That isn't by any chance my smoking stand?"

"But you aren't going to smoke much this Summer, Father William," she says, and thinks a hand into my arm. "I heard you say so yourself."

Jane is very serene. Now and then, as she sits on our small verandah with her tapestry, I see her raise her eyes and glance toward the house, but she is not, I am quite certain it, nor do I. I note that, like Maggie Morrison, she does not go very near to it.

Jane intends to develop and print some pictures of the house this evening.

Later. I have just had a surprise amounting to shock. Jane finds she has forgotten the black japanned lantern with a red slide which she uses in the mysterious rites of developing pictures, and suggests that we go to the other house and use the red lamp there.

"But I can bring it here."

"I am enough being silly about the other house, William," she says with an air of resolution. "Anyhow the pantry there is better, and you can sit in the kitchen. Bring a book or something."

She has, poor Jane, very much the air of Mama Leary's kitten the day Jack cornered it and it came home resolutely and looked him in the eye in effect, Jane is going out to meet her bugaboo and stare it down.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

THIS is the time of the year when everybody is cleaning house and getting ready for the Summer. One husband says he has been touring all the rooms on a carpet.

HIS wife had him arrested the other day for reckless driving.

SHE claims he run over two of her Pomeranians.

SHE told the judge that the dogs had the right of way.

ANOTHER woman accused her husband of swooping up her Peekinese with the vacuum cleaner.

THE husband claimed she was unreasonable. He said she wanted him to beat the carpets with one hand and whip the children with the other.

THEY finally compromised by putting the kids inside the rugs.

MEN are a nuisance, but a woman usually likes to have one around the house to pay the rent.

A HUSBAND comes in handy on the first of the month.

HALF the men in this country are paying bills and the other half are thinking up excuses.

WIVES only have to wash the dishes, scrub the floors and dust the furniture, but the husbands have to pay the rent. This is the hardest part of the housework.

OF course, when men are unemployed they should help at home. It's the thought of brooms, mops and scrubbing brushes that makes the men go out and hunt for jobs.

HUSBANDS used to slip away at night, now they sneak out of the house in the morning.

WHEN a man joins an automobile club he doesn't want to spend a beautiful day driving a carpet sweeper.

WHEN a woman gets married she should promise to love, honor and give her husband his Saturday afternoons off.

BUT men are peculiar! They think that a $2 license should explain all the clauses in the Declaration of Independence.

THERE'S only one sure way to get husbands to assist at home. Take a tip from the 18th amendment and make it against the law for a man to help his wife with the housework.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE ILLS WE HAVE

By Bertha R. McDonald

HE smiled reminiscently when he recalled the girl's obvious timidity the day she came in answer to his advertisement. How women, especially fearfully young, innocent things, do fall for fine feathers, baubles and good food!

She had been with him scarcely a month when he contrived to keep her after hours, making an invitation to dine with him later seem the most natural thing in the world.

Afterwards it was but a short time until she was accepting something from him almost every day—clothes, jewelry, flowers. The clothes proposition was easy. She happened to be the same size and build as his wife—the wife with whom marriage had been such a lamentable failure.

Jim listened so sympathetically to the stories of his domestic troubles. Her innocent solicitude touched him.

Now, at last, he had secured her promise to run away with him. After all, it had been easier than he had anticipated, and the satisfaction was not nearly so great as he thought it was going to be, but her beauty and refreshing youth made her less disagreeable, to say the least, than life with a wife who was too dull even to be suspicious of him.

He was taking her to his father's summer home which had just been turned over to him; an ideal spot for surreptitious wooing. Later he would write asking his wife for his freedom. He had succeeded in convincing this lady who bore his name that he had been summoned hurriedly to his father's place to oversee some repairs and that it was best for her to remain behind.

When he reached the station, on the day set for departure, he swung himself to the platform and stood there whistling softly until the train began to move, then he went directly to the smoker.

The first station was passed before he strolled leisurely back toward the stateroom, as per agreement. The moment he let himself into the compartment his eyes lighted upon a large white envelope bearing his name, pinned securely to the back of the seat with a bouquet pin. With a vague sense of foreboding, he unloosed it and removed the enclosure.

"Before you've begun this (he read) I shall be far away from you. Your most recent private secretary was your wife's cousin, of whom you've never heard, planted in your office for the express purpose of trapping you, by a woman who is too fine to be a life companion for you and who always more than you've ever given her credit for being. She is now in possession of all the funny tricks you into buying for me and by this time is probably ready to start for Reno. I hope they'll be a divorce suit with evidence so sensational that you and your office will be finished forever. Men like you who consider every pretty girl who applies for work in your offices your rightful prey, don't deserve a moment's consideration from decent women.

"Your Latest Secretary."

Instead of the righteous indignation which ordinarily would have filled his soul after realizing how thoroughly he had been taken in, this worldly transgressor experienced a sensation which he found it difficult to analyze.

A home with a dull, unattractive wife was one thing; the wife headed toward Reno was quite another. To be sure, he had been remotely considering having a divorce in the family but he hadn't contemplated sealing it once from the other side of the house.

With each revolution of the car wheels, his feeling for his wife grew more considerate. In an hour she was almost desirable; a little later she became a prized possession, and when the first stop was made he got off, determined to take the next train back, in an endeavor to reach home before she started to that farfamed little city from whence few travelers return mated.

On the way in he mentally faced his gross neglect of her. He remembered clearly the first time he stayed away all night and lied to her about it. His mind's eye reviewed the galaxy of snappy secretaries that had adorned his office from time to time and the money he had squandered on each of them.

In the course of his mental argument, he finally became convinced that his wife's customary nagging attitude toward him not only was excusable, it was absolutely justified. By the time he reached his own apartment he was even grateful to the late lamented cousin who had helped in the opening of his eyes to the dreadful abyss toward which he had been so steadily drifting and which he now promised himself should be given a wide berth during the remainder of his life.

When he let himself in, his wife was sitting before an open Priscilla cabinet quietly sewing. She looked at him, raised her brows interrogatively but did not speak.

"I—I didn't go," he stammered, sheepishly.

"—I decided you might as well go with me after all."

Still she vouchsafed no reply, regarding him disinterestedly, much as though this unfamiliar attention was boring her.

"Here—here's a bill. Maybe you'd like to buy yourself something new before we go."

He laid the bill upon the cabinet and waited for her to acknowledge the courtesy, marveling meanwhile at her good taste in controlling herself against the immediate mention of her cousin and—then!

However, he wished she would say something. He stayed in all evening, hoping to get the unpleasantness over with. It was the most uncomfortable evening he ever remembered spending. The air seemed surcharged with some powerful explosive, ready to be set off at any moment. Finally, when he could no longer endure the suspense and uncertainty, he gathered sufficient courage to say hesitatingly, "Funny I never hearing you mention the cousin in your family."

He almost choked waiting for her answer but was glad he had made the opening. Finally his wife raised her eyes from the book she was reading and looked across the table at him.

"Never had but one. He died two or three years ago," she said, regarding him curiously.

Something seemed to drop out of his very middle. Somebody had lied to him. Wife or secretary—which? What was the point anyway? What had happened to his world? For the first time in his business career, a woman employee had tired of him before he had of her.

His vanity was sorely bruised. He began to treasure unpretty thoughts about the eternal feminine generally. His recalled a bit from Hamlet—something about a power that makes us bear those ills we have, rather than fly to those we know not of. He wished he had taken that advice to himself. Perhaps it was not yet too late. Very well. He would stick to his wife but as for the rest of womankind, especially secretaries, bah! And again—several times—

A month later, the following letter found its way to a certain little lady, secretarily inclined, from a very grateful wife:

"My dear, our scheme succeeded beyond my wildest dreams. He was consumed with curiosity when he got back that night and found me still at home, fidgeting until he was able to make a reference to cousins. When I told him that my only cousin, a man, had been dead almost two years, he was like a person who had been dealt a violent blow. I mean never to let him know that my cousin left a pretty widow who was obliged to earn her living. You are there, we are here. If we ever meet again, I shall pretend that I do not know you. Gratefully, your cousin-in-law.

P. S.—His new secretary is a man."

CLEANEM'S TWO TRICK ALIENISTS, DR DON E VETTER AND PROF ALLAR NUTTZE, HAVE TESTIFIED IN THEIR BELIEF OUR ELLA'S MIND IS AS SOUND AS THE INSIDE OF A DRUM, AND IS UNFIT TO ADMINISTER A FORTUNE. ATTORNEY LEROY OBJECTED SO STRENUOUSLY TO THEIR TESTIMONY THAT HE AND CLEANEM JUST MISSED BY INCHES COMING TO BLOWS. JUDGE JONES WAS FORCED TO POUND FOR ORDER. AND LOOK WHO'S ON THE STAND NOW!
WHEN DID YOU FIRST NOTICE THAT YOUR STEPDAUGHTER WAS NOT MENTALLY ALL THAT YOU WOULD HAVE HER?
LAST JULY. I WAS AWAKENED AT MIDNIGHT BY PECULIAR NOISES AND WENT UP HER ROOM. I FOUND HER DRESSED IN AN OLD SHAWL WITH A FEATHER STUCK IN HER HAIR MAKING LOVE TO DRESS-MAKERS FORM
SHE ALWAYS LOOKED LAZY, MOPING AROUND AS THOUGH ABOUT TO REFUSE TO WORK. I DID EVERYTHING FOR HER AND MORE ATTENTION TO HER THAN TO MY OWN DAUGHTERS GIVING HER EVERY OPPORTUNITY TO KEEP HERSELF OCCUPIED—BUT ALL SHE GAVE ME WAS INSOLENCE. SHE RAN AWAY FROM HOME TWICE AND SHE HAD DELUSIONS THAT SHE WAS A GREAT ACTRESS
MY TWO GIRLS USED TO TRY TO TAKE HOLD OF HER AND MAKE SOMETHING OUT OF HER. THEY EVEN WANTED TO TAKE HER TO PARTIES AND DANCES, BUT SHE NEVER. COULD SEE IT THAT WAY. ALL SHE DID WAS QUARREL WITH THEM AND TRY TO MAKE THEIR LIVES AS MISERABLE AS HER DISPOSITION.
ON AND ON AND ON!
Despite rebukes from Judge Jones and frantic objections from Attorney Leroy, Mrs. Cinders had her say. She'd be saying it yet if court hadn't adjourned! BUT WAIT! ELLA'S TURN WILL COME!

FOXY GRANDPA'S INTERESTING BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

BOBBY looked at the beautiful marble statue of a lovely young girl and a handsome young man with wings on his shoulders bending over to kiss her and asked:

"Who are they, Foxy Grandpa?"

"Cupid and Psyche," I answered.

"Wasn't Cupid the son of Venus?" asked Bobby with a slight hint of pride in his voice to think that he remembered.

"Go to the head of the class," I laughed.

"I never heard of Psyche," declared Bobby. "But that statue looks as if he liked her very much. Do you know anything about her, Foxy Grandpa?"

Bobby's wistful eyes pleaded for the story, so we sat down on a bench near this beautiful statue and I told him the beginning of the story of Cupid and Psyche.

"In the days of ancient Greece there lived there a king who had three daughters, and the youngest named Psyche, was famous for her unusual beauty.

"When Psyche went out to take a walk people in the streets threw flowers for her to walk on, and in truth they worshipped her for her beauty. The time came for Psyche to marry; but a strange thing happened. A mysterious voice commanded the king, her father, to take her and leave her on a bleak wild mountain. Every one was sad and the news went through the city that Psyche was about to be sacrificed.

"This was the reason. You know that Venus was considered, and considered herself, the most beautiful woman in the world, and when she heard that the people had proclaimed Psyche more beautiful than herself, she determined to punish Psyche.

"Cupid, as you said, was the son of Venus and the god of love who made marriages between people, so Venus told Cupid to marry Psyche to the ugliest creature on earth.

"So poor Psyche was put on the top of this bare mountain and was frightened to death until a wind fairy came and took her to a strange palace.

"There the beautiful girl was served by unseen spirits with everything good to eat, and played the most beautiful music for her all the time.

"One night, in the middle of the night, some one strange came and spoke so tenderly to Psyche that she fell in love with him and promised to be his wife.

"But he warned her against one thing. He told her she could do what she pleased in the beautiful palace which he had built for her, but that there was only one thing which she must not do, and that was not to try to see his face.

"This was all very well in the night time, but in the day time Psyche was very lonely, and it was then that the unseen spirits around her told her that Venus had married her to a monster!

"Naturally Psyche was very much troubled over this and determined to see her husband's face. So that night, when her husband lay sleeping, she lit a lamp and looked in his face, and there by her side lay the most beautiful young man she had ever seen. He was Cupid! In her joy the lovely Psyche upset the lamp and Cupid awakened!

"Instead of being very happy he almost burst into tears and held her in his arms and told her that they must part. Because when Psyche asked him the reason, he told her that his mother, Venus, had commanded him to marry her to a monster, and that if she knew that he had married her himself that she would punish him terribly.

"So he said farewell to his beloved bride, spread his wings and flew away."

"Oh, how sad," groaned Bobby. "I was hoping they lived happily ever afterward. Didn't they ever find each other again?"

"I'll tell you that another time," I answered.

Resinol Soap
her favorite for fifteen years
Had despaired of having clear skin

Baltimore, Md., July 18:—"For the past fifteen years I have used your splendid soap, though I must have given up in despair of having a good, clear skin, but after using Resinol Soap for one month I noticed a decided improvement. I have also two girls, age five and two, who boast of splendid skin, and they have always been washed with Resinol Soap.

I can assure you of my complete confidence in this soap as well as Resinol Ointment which my father used constantly for his terrible sores and callouses." (Signed) Vola [illegible]

Little Charles, aged three, was taking a walk with his grandmother when he came to a frog pond.

For some time he listened to the peepers in perfect contentment until a large green frog at his feet croaked.

"Oh, grandma!" he exclaimed, not seeing the frog, "there must be a big animal in there. Just hear him grit his teeth!"

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

WOMAN is no longer a "slave"—but she still loves to decorate herself in "slave necklaces," "slave bracelets," ankle-chains and wedding rings, and still spends her days in a better attitude, picking up the things a man has thrown around.

Woman has begun to think seriously about life—but she still worries as to whether to let her hair grow out or not, and uses up a lot of mental energy, wondering whose "style" she is.

Woman has learned to reason—but, she still expects a man to be as ardent before luncheon as he is after dinner and as eager to look her after the honeymoon as he was before the wedding.

Woman wears knickerbockers and at last admits that she is a biped—but she still thinks of her legs as ornamental, rather than as useful.

Woman laughs at man's ancient boast of his "superiority"—but she still believes that it requires a manicure, a milliner, a beauty doctor and fifty-seven varieties of cosmetics to make a woman attractive enough for him.

Woman can earn her own living, drive a car and win a golf championship—but she still feels more comfortable if there is "a man about the house" to fix things or go down and see what the noise is.

Woman is no longer a silly sentimentalist—but she still prefers a man who thinks the moon and stars were made to kiss under to one who stops to talk about the distance to Mars.

Woman knows all about man's failings, but she still believes him [illegible] when he vows he will never look at another woman; and she will forgive him for anything on earth, if only he tells her that love of her "drove him to it."

Woman has gone in for higher mathematics—but she still gets her figures twisted, when she is talking about her weight, her age or the number of men she "might have married."

Woman deplores the fact that men are so primitive—but she still dreams of being swept off her feet and rushed into marriage by a bold, indomitable Lochinvar.

* * *

Woman's life is no longer made up of little things, but of "Big Things"—but she still feels utterly lost without her lipstick.

Woman is enlightened, advanced, intelligent—FREE!

* * *

She prefers a desk to a gas-range, a pay-envelope to a charge account, and a career to dependence—but she still hopes that when she wins her laurels there will be a few orange blossoms mixed with them!

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

By William F. Kirk

PA was laffing wen he calm hoam last nite.

Why the merth? sed Ma. It is sumthing new to see you enter the house with a chuckel, sed Ma. It sends my memmory wing-ing back to the wild days, sed Ma.

I was jest laffing to myself, sed Pa. I saw yure frend Missus Johnson down the St. this P. M. see Pa. & she had on quite a short skirt. Wimmen that's fat shuddent ought to wear short skirts, sed Pa, in the words of the poet, sed Pa. Slimmer ladys lift their brows

Wen your calfs is big as cows, sed Pa.

You should not pick flaws with the apperents of my gurl frends, sed Ma.

Gurl frends? sed Pa. If Missus Johnson is a gurl I am the king of Siam, sed Pa.

She is not as yung as she onst was, to be sure, sed Ma, but for that matter, sed Ma, neether are you & you must remember, too, sed Ma, that you are not a stiff yureself.

What does it meen, stiff, I sed.

It meens a slim fairy, Bobbie, sed Ma. Sumthing like a sprite. Your father shud be cairful & not threw stones wen he lives in the gas house, sed Ma.

You meen glass house, sed Pa, & I will adder-mit I was rong to laff about yure frend bealing fat wenn I married a fat lady myself, sed Pa.

How dare you call me a fat lady? sed Ma.

Well, you wuddent X-pect me to call you Silver, wud you? sed Pa.

I think you are very X-asperating tonite, sed Ma. I doent know what does that meen but Ma sed it. X-asperating.

The ladys in my mothers time, sed Pa, had a big a-vantage over the dalies now, sed Pa. If they was fat they oud hide it a little bit in long skirts, sed Pa, but the ladys of today has got to stand out in four the world jest as Nater made them, sed Pa, the less parts of fat ones. Short skirts are a jed man, sed Pa, ded men tales.

TRADE LEADERS MEET JUNE 1 IN SALEM

By FRANK H. MELDON,
Financial Editor.

Trade leaders of the Bay State assemble in Salem June 1, when the Massachusetts State Chamber of Commerce opens its two day session. Mayor George L. Bates of the Witch City will welcome the hundreds of delegates. Secretary Edward G. Stacy points out that this is the first time the Chamber has ever met outside of one of the larger New England cities and also that it is the first time the session has been prolonged to two days.

Edward G. Stacy George L. Bates

Governor Ralph O. Brewster will be the principal speaker at the opening of the meetings, to be held at the new Hotel Hawthorne. Other speakers include Governor Alvan T. Fuller, Mayor Bates of Salem, Mayor Curley of Boston, Arthur W. Hall, merchandise specialist of Boston; Harris R. Cox, director of the Massachusetts Department of Labor; Greene, general manager of the national better business bureau; Austin F. Baker, chairman of the commercial arbitration committee of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association; Dr. Samuel W. Stratton, president Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and R. Clyston Fyke, counsel for the American Fair Trade League, and many others.

Readers of this column will recall that a while ago the writer cited the regret felt by proponents of the bill to free the Cape Cod canals over the fact that Samuel E. Winslow of Worcester, "the skate king," was no longer a member of Congress, on the floor of the fight for the measure. He was the author of the Cape Cod bill presented in previous sessions. "Sam" Winslow is now in Washington, serving his battle for the bill, and some State Streeters see in this fact an augury of success next January. Winslow, which will benefit largely by the freeing of the canals, is also quite a bit when the former Congressman's visit to the Capitol oecame known.

State Street rumors are that shares of the new Nickel Plate Company, which Van Sweringens propose to create to absorb the Erie, Pere Marquette, Hocking Valley, Chesapeake & Ohio and present Nickel Plate Railroads, will bear a 7 per cent. dividend. Stock of the company rejected by the Interstate Commerce Commission was to receive only 6 per cent., but subsequent increases in the dividends of the roads involved is said to have necessitated an advanced rate.

By B. C. FORBES

Is increasing demand in this country for foreign-made products due to superior quality and workmanship? Or, do foreign-made products actually maintain superior quality or workmanship?

These and similar questions were raised by an Ohio correspondent in a recent column. Replies were even yesterday. More follow.

Frankly, the response from American manufacturers is disappointing. Letters upholding the complaint of the writer of the original letter have outnumbered replies from manufacturers. Why is this? Surely this is not to be interpreted as an admission that foreigners turn out goods distinctly superior to ours?

One workman, it is interesting to note, springs to the defense of American manufacturers.

H. W. Gyphers, New Haven, Conn., writes:

"I was greatly interested in the letter you published from a resident of Ohio. I wish to affirm everything he states and to add one further item to the list, namely, why that the American dye manufacturers seemingly cannot compete in quality with the foreign products, but is

"You may buy your material and have the assurance of the color being fast to what you are guaranteed, but I have yet to find the colors to be fast." Other persons report to socks, shirts or even to suitings.

"It seems to be considered a great stroke of business for the American manufacturers can find a synthetic product. Without question there is a large $200,000,000 trade under their thumb. He would also observe that the British have stopped the custom of furnishing widows, alive, with the dead bodies of their husband in India, and the other unpleasant Hindu habit of marrying girls of nine and nine years old, or even younger, to men past fifty.

"Such reasonableness would have done more with Russell than keeping him out.

POOR ABD-EL-KRIM, hunted over the sands of Africa with his plucky comrades, French bombs and quick-firing guns sending death through the air, gives up after a courageous fight.

And that strengthens the French government, and calls forth talk of "peace with honor."

Nothing pleases a people, or strengthens monarchy or republic, so much as news of victory over another country. That's why so many wars have been started.

MR. RILEY, president of a Pennsylvania bank, says too many laws burden the nation. They do, and it would be still worse if the nation hadn't formed the habit of deciding for itself which particular laws to obey.

Within a short time four thousand new laws have been offered for consideration by legislative bodies in the United States.

If somebody could invent one law that would compel obedience to the old Ten Commandments that would be welcome.

PROHIBITIONISTS plan to run an Independent Republican candidate for Senator in New York State. Gifford Pinchot probably will run as an Independent "Dry" Republican in Pennsylvania. The wet and dry issue is evidently to become important in politics from now until 1928.

New York's dry nomination is based upon the fact that Senator Wadsworth is supposed to be wet. Politicians who ought to know say that any Independent would have poor chance against Senator Wadsworth. Governor Pinchot's changes in Pennsylvania would be much better.

Nation Is in Revolt

So Much Snooping and Spying Getting on the Public's Nerves

Spokesmen for the President promptly disavow any intent to enforce the new dry order oppressively.

That order, we are assured, was not meant to be made public; was only a little one, routine in character; was designed to apply to merely a handful of local officials in a single State, and therefore masked no ambitious challenge of State's rights. Because of its littleness, we are asked to excuse it. If it doesn't work well it will, the assurance runs, be modified or recalled.

Such a promise was to be expected from a President as astute and prudent as Mr. Coolidge. The country's protest, covering every party and every section, at what seemed a threat of more sneaking, more snooping, more blackmailing and more hypocrisy, has not been aimed primarily at him.

There has been general perception that he meditated no wholesale usurpation of executive power. Unlike some of his predecessors, he is recognized as not imperious, lustful of sway, or self-willed.

It was not his motives which were doubted, but the wisdom of the order in its possible bearing upon the underlying problem.

There are, say, 120,000,000 people in the United States, of whom perhaps 100,000,000 are old enough to be possible drinkers of fluids containing alcohol.

How many of these 100,000,000 are total abstainers can only be surmised. For purposes merely for illustration, let us assume 40 per cent. That leaves 60,000,000 Americans whose personal drinking habits, if prohibition is to be successfully enforced, must somehow be brought within official scrutiny.

The machinery of Federal enforcement as now geared comprises about 1,800 men, a proportion of whom are clerks and executives not available for spy service.

If every State, county and local officeholder in the land were given Federal badges and set to sleuthing upon their fellow-citizens, the force would still be insufficient.

In his recent examination before the Senate special committee, the chief of the Federal prohibition forces, General Andrews, conceded as much.

To bring under continuous espionage the scores of millions of possible drinkers would require millions of sneakers, snoopers and spies—one at least at every window, door and keyhole.

Happily in this land of traditional freedom there are not that number of men and women willing so to debase themselves.

The experiment of fanatic prohibition has already broken down because in its nature it is impossible.

Spasmodic gestures at tightening up its enforcement may be expected from time to time as political pressure varies, but at best they are bound to be fantastic and essentially futile, because there is no possible method of regulating the sumptuary habits of so many millions of people by compulsion. It has never been done; it cannot be done; failure and confusion await every new experiment in that direction.

It is because the American people, after a dazed interval, are becoming conscious of this truth that there has been such a widespread and swift reaction to the incident of the executive dry order.

The villainies, futilities and hypocrisies of Volsteadism are getting on their nerves.

They are reaching a state of mind where it will soon be dangerous to continue to deny them the right to vote their views upon such a perversion of temperance.

The executive order which, as now officially explained, embodies an invidious and wholly unwarranted reflection upon one of the greatest and finest of our States—California—should, of course, be withdrawn, because it is both useless and in effect insulting.

But more fundamental than that, the entire question of prohibition should be submitted to the people of every State for review.

"How You Talk!"

As the Maine Farmer Is Likely to Say to Uncle Sam

Dr. Harold S. Boardman, who will be inaugurated next month as the seventh president of the University of Maine, expressed the belief last Summer in a newspaper interview that too many Americans are going to college.

"About half of us," President-elect Boardman said at that time, "are fitted to go through college and the rest of us are merely handicapping ourselves and others by going."

Undoubtedly it is true, as Dr. Boardman suggested, that too many youngsters go to college nowadays because it is "the thing to do," like baggy pants, and Valentino sideboards, and boyish bobs, and all the other fads and fancies that make the Younger Generation so interesting.

But, if a fellow DOESN'T go to college, how in the name of Pomona is he going to understand such a Government Bulletin as that which lately has been sent out by the Department of Agriculture on the subject of "Senescence and Rejuvenescence in the Potato Plant"?

Permit us to quote a paragraph or two, and then tell us, offhand, whether you get the drift of the gentleman in Washington:

"Old cells have less visible protein material in the nucleus in the form of granules and the bulk of the cytoplasm is filled with large vacuoles. The chromatin seems to be used up in the process of differentiation."

"The cell differentiation is a cytoplastic process."

"Death is preceded by a general collapse of all parts of the cell with a marked hydrolysis of the colloids. This is indicated by the increased vacuolization of the cell organs except the walls."

"Any of the cells of the starch parenchyma are capable of becoming meristematic."

"The nuclei of the rejuvenated cells show much more chromatin than those of the ordinary parenchyma."

Having read these quotations from the Bulletin five times, all we can say is we're astounded. Who would have thought it!

No wonder potatoes went up.

THE SHOW GOES ON JUST THE SAME

By DR. FRANK CRANE

SOME time ago a trapeze actress in the circus fell a distance of thirty feet from her trapeze to the floor. There was no net or other device to break her fall and she sustained a fracture of the arm and possible internal injuries.

The accident happened in the middle of the trapeze act in which she and other members of her family were performing. She lost her footing and fell.

Confusion reigned for a few moments. Women and children screamed and men rushed about for aid. Soon an animal act was rushed into the arena and the show went on.

The show always must go on.

Any one of us may disappear; a brick may fall on him or an automobile truck run over him, and it is as if one threw a pebble into the pool. There is a little confusion, a few waves circles about the place, and soon all is quiet as before.

None of us would be missed. One may drop out of his place in society, a few friends will mourn him, a few will notice his absence, and it will cause temporary sadness. But in a little while he is forgotten.

Where are the snows of yesterday? Where are the beautiful women like Helen of Troy that once disturbed the past? Where are the heroes, the mighty men of old, that once bestrode the world?

The great as well as the small must go down, and life flows on. The life of the community is like a resistless tide. Nothing can impede its progress. However cataclysmic the calamities that disturb it, they are soon swallowed up in the progress of events.

One of the poems which was a favorite with Abraham Lincoln must come to mind:

"O, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?"

THOSE IN GLASS HOUSES SHOULDN'T THROW STONES

Is it natural for you to analyze those you meet with the idea of learning their most disagreeable traits and characteristics?

Must you know for a certainty just where they fail to measure up to high standards?

If you make this practice it is not surprising if you find very few for whom you have a friendly feeling.

Suppose the persons you meet were as keen on character study as you are, how would you grade in their estimation?

You know of many mean, despicable tendencies on your own part and you don't want to tell the world about them.

Perhaps because of your character study you are able to cover the telltale lines which would proclaim your inmost character.

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "PATIENCE, GENTLEMEN!"

WOMEN are no LONGER
Like FLOWERS that,
Under the GUIDING
HAND of NATURE, open
Wide their PETALS
And after having given
The WORLD of their FRAGRANCE are content
To FADE slowly
And DIE.
NO! this appears
A more or less
FUTILE gesture to the MODERN WOMAN.

For the FLOWER, although
It GIVES SWEETNESS
To OTHERS, never Develops ITSELF.
So now, ALL WOMEN are Bursting forth in the FULL BLOOM of ACCOMPLISHMENT, and
Though the world MAY Seem LESS fragrant at
The MOMENT, the IDEA
IS SOUND and in hundreds
Of years from NOW
It will be WONDERFUL
FOR MEN—perhaps!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"I'M a young girl of twenty-four," says she, "and I've been married five years and have two children. My husband is a good man but he doesn't seem to care about me the way he ought. He forgets! I'd like to go around and have a little fun like other girls and if dinner isn't ready on the minute, he gets awful sore. Don't you think, Elsie, that——"

There are five more pages to the letter, but it isn't necessary to repeat them. That is familiar line—"I'M A YOUNG GIRL OF TWENTY-FOUR"—tells the whole tale.

That's a common line in these brisk days. We're all out to be young. And stay young. The Youth idea has hit us like an epidemic. Grandma dresses like Granddaughter. Grandpa does his daily dozen with Grandson. If your arteries are hardening and your arches giving up the fight, never mind, old dear. Buy a new sport suit—one of those nifty plaids—take a course of Charleston lessons and you'll forget all about it. Age is only a delusion. Ain't Boy!

That's the new attitude and it's a good attitude. It's going to put a new punch into all our programs.

But it also tends to eliminate a lot of highly necessary responsibilities. Which isn't so good.

Wifehood a Job.

For instance, consider this extremely old-fashioned job of being a wife. Take it any way you please, a wife job involves considerable toil and responsibility. There are dishes to be washed, flapjacks to be fried, budgets to be made, dollars to be stretched to fulfill their original capacity. It is and always has been a two-fisted profession. And it takes an honest-to-goodness grown-up woman to swing it properly.

Hitherto it has been assumed that a female of twenty-four who has been married for five years and has two children is an honest-to-goodness grown-up woman. But you'll have to do some fancy sleuthing before you'll find any such who will acknowledge that they're grown-up ladies in this dispensation.

"Grown up? I should say NOT!" they chorus in indignation. "Why, everyone says I don't look a day over seventeen. You oughta see me in that new sport suit of mine—the pink one. Class! I'll say! Grown up? Say, do you think I'm a dead one?"

Then to prove that they are not "dead ones" they park the baby with grandma, shove the unwashed dishes under the sink, don the pink sport suit and step out for an afternoon with their Girl Friend. If the husband, coming later to a dinnerless house, raises a protest, they are righteously aggrieved.

A Little Fun

"Can a girl have a little fun?" they cry. "Do you suppose I'm going to bury myself in this old house at my age?"

Wherefore I consider it high time that some one hurled a few mean words on this subject.

It's great to be a kid——

But it's even greater to know when you get over being one.

A married woman of twenty-four with two children is NOT a "young girl." Nor is a single woman of that age a young girl.

They are both voting citizens and are supposed to pay their way in a practical world by holding down steady jobs.

Holding down a steady job doesn't mean a round of window shopping in the middle of the afternoon. Any young woman who attempted that in an office would be promptly dismissed. Any young wife who soldiers on her job in the home ought to be dismissed WITHOUT ALIMONY.

When a woman marries she definitely enters the Professional Workers' class. She can no longer expect the leisure and diversions which she had as a girl. She has outgrown these things as she has outgrown her milk teeth. It's up to her to stop acting like a mere slip of a child. And it's also up to her to stop THINKING about herself in those terms.

A large proportion of our divorces are caused by just such thought. Pa and Ma insist on regarding themselves as Cutie and Sweetie instead of Mr. and Mrs. Which is no way to stay married. Marriage is no Cutie job.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

There is always room for a man of force and he makes room for many. —Emerson.

Better a live beggar than a dead king. —La Fontaine.

He that can work is a born king of something. —Carlyle.

Diligence is the mother of good luck. —Franklin.

No man has ever learned anything rightly, until he knows every day is Doomsday. —Emerson.

A man who gives his children habits of industry provides better than by giving them fortunes. —Whately.

Sloth maketh all things difficult; industry, easy. —Franklin.

Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill. —Shakespeare.

Make not thyself judge of any man.—Longfellow.

A jealous man always finds more than he looks for.—De Scudery.

Busy New England

Many Irons in the Fire

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad has carried more freight over its lines this Spring than ever before in its history.

The statement is made on the authority of Robert H. Newcomb, assistant to the vice-president of the railroad company, who adds:

"New England is not going to the dogs in a hack, nor is the transportation system of this section bound for oblivion."

The cotton textiles trade is in the dumps the wide world over. John Mullaney, who recently toured Germany and Italy erecting twisters, warpers and spoolers, "made in Lowell," found conditions in the former country "as bad, if not worse, than they are here." Our shoemakers, too, still are a bit glum—the shoe rainbow will be visible in July, when the Shoe and Leather Exposition and Style Show opens—but what some people are all too apt to lose sight of is that New England makes a thousand and one commodities besides cotton cloth and good shoes.

Mr Newcomb's gladdening words prove it. If the New Haven has been carrying more freight than ever before in its history, SOMEBODY in New England has been making things and selling them. Away with melancholy! "Up and at them!"

Mr. Without-a-Dollar

When, If Ever, Did a Boss-Ruled Convention Nominate Him for Governor?

State Senator John W. Haigis, of Greenfield, is one of the latest to join in the chorus of the Bosses' Song, the all-pervading sentiment of which is that under the direct primary system "the poor man, the POOR candidate, has no chance."

With all due respect to the able and affable young publisher of the "Recorder," his lament has become almost as stale, almost as worm-eaten, as the "Prisoner's Song."

From William Gaston's day, in 1875, to Eben S. Draper's time, in 1911, how many POOR men were nominated for the governorship of Massachusetts in Republican State conventions?

Was a single one of them as poor in the goods of the world as Channing H. Cox, nominated in 1920 by DIRECT vote of his fellow-Republicans?

Was any one of them a more satisfactory GOVERNOR, from the "party" point of view, than Channing Cox?

If so, will the honorable Senator from the Franklin and Hampshire district tell us in what respect?

We Make Our World

One of the commonest experiences of life is to see the poor and hard-pressed happy, and the rich and fortunate discontented. It is the part of wisdom to dwell on those details of life in which we happen to be favored. Browning wrote:

"The little more, and how much it is,
The little less and what miles away."

There is nothing more useful or more beautiful than the art of appreciating little things. Nothing poisons life more than making our demands needlessly large. The person who depends on material objects, and desires more things all the time, is seldom happy.
